TENNESSEE river has its course chiefly in the state of the same name, and is the largest tributary of the Ohio. Its most remote sources are Clinch river & Holston river, which rises in the Alleghany mountains in Virginia. Its other head branches are Nolachucky, French Broad, Tellico and Richland. The Holston & Clinch, of which the others are branches, unite about 45 miles S. of W. from Knoxville, forming the Tennessee proper, which then pursues a S.W. direction across the state, and enters the state of Alabama, in which it pursues a westerly course for 150 or 200 miles, & then turns N., and crosses the state of Tennessee, & the western part of Kentucky, and enters the Ohio 11¼ ms. below the mouth of Cumberland river, & 47¼ miles above the entrance of the Ohio into the Mississippi, by the course of the river. It receives through its whole course many tributaries, none of which are of very great extent. The whole descent of the river from its most remote source to its mouth, is about 1,700 feet; its whole length by the course of the river is nearly 1,200 miles, being longer than the Ohio below Pittsburg. It drains a surface of 41,000 square miles. There are no perpendicular falls, and few rapids which obstruct navigation, through its whole course. The greatest obstruction is the Muscle shoals in Alabama. Florence, at the foot of these rapids on the N. side, is 259 miles from its mouth, and to this distance steamboats come during high water. A canal has been made around these shoals 36 miles in length, but is designed to be extended further; and above, the navigation for boats is unobstructed for 250 miles. At that distance occurs the suck, or whirl, in which the river passes a large projecting rock on the N. side, causing a sudden bend in the river, which produces the whirl. The whirl is at the entrance into the Cumberland mountains, above which the country is rough, and the navigation is more difficult. The river being rapid, is chiefly favorable to navigation down the stream.

TENNESSEE, one of the United States, lies between lat. 35° & 36° 30′ N., and lon. 81° 30′ & 90° 10′ W. Its mean length is 400 miles, & its mean breadth 114 miles, containing 44,000 sq. miles. Pop. in 1790, was 35,691; in 1800, 105,602; in 1810, 261,727; in 1820, 422,813; in 1830, 681,904; in 1840, 829,210; and in 1850, 1,002,625. It is divided into 79 counties. The following table gives the number of dwellings, inhabitants, cultivated farms, and manufacturing establishments in each:—

Federal representative population, 906,840.

The Cumberland mountains extend through the middle of the state in a southwest direction, dividing it into two parts, denominated East Tennessee & West Tennessee. The western part of Tennessee is level or gently undulating; in the middle it is hilly. East Tennessee abounds in mountains, many of them elevated, presenting much grand picturesque scenery. Of the mountains, Cumberland, or Great Laurel Ridge, is the most remarkable. It here has an elevation of more than 1,000 feet; Stone, Yellow, Iron, Ball, Smoky, & Unika mntns., form a range in the S.E., & constitute the eastern boundary of the state. Northwest of these are Bay's Mountain, Cooper's Ridge, Clinch Mountain, Powell's Mountain, and Willing's Ridge, with valleys between them from 5 to 10 miles wide. Caves of great depth & extent are found in the eastern part of the state. The soil is various, but generally fertile. The western part has a dark rich soil, in the middle are great quantities of excellent land, in the eastern part the mountains are mostly sterile, but the valleys are very fertile. The country has a great profusion of native timber, poplar, hickory, walnut, oak, beach, sycamore, locust, cherry, sugar maple, &c. There are many medicinal plants. The soil produces abundantly cotton & tobacco, the staple commodities of the state; also grain, grass, & fruit. The eastern portion of the state contains the principal mineral deposits, among which are ores of iron copper, lead, and beds of coal; mineral springs occur; granite & limestone abound; in the latter formation are many caverns of great extent, some have been explored for miles.

There were in this state in 1850, 5,175,173 acres of land improved, & 13,808,849 unimproved land in farms. Cash value of farms, $97,851,212; and the value of implements and machinery, $5,360,210. Live Stock.—horses, 270,636; asses & mules, 75,203; milch cows, 250,456; working oxen, 86,255; other cattle, 414,951; sheep, 811,591; swine, 3,104,800; value of live stock, $29,978,016.

Federal representative population, 189,327. Fourteen cos. have been erected since 1850, viz., Bell, Burnett, Ellis, El Paso, Freestone, Hidalgo, McClellan, McKinley, Orange, Presidio, Tarrant, Trinity, Wood, and Uvalde.

The general aspect of the country is that of a vast inclined plane, gradually sloping from the mountains eastward to the sea, & traversed by numerous rivers, all having a south-east direction. It may be naturally divided into three regions: the first, which is level, extends along the coast with a breadth varying from 100 to 30 miles, being narrowest at the south-west. The soil of this region is principally a rich alluvion, with scarcely a stone, & singularly free from stagnant swamps. Broad woodlands fringe the banks of the rivers, between which are extensive and rich pasture-lands. The second division, the largest of the three, is the undulating prairie region which extends for 150 or 200 miles further inland, its wide grassy tracts alternating with others that are thickly timbered. Limestone & sandstone form the common sub-strata of this section. The third, or mountainous region situated principally on the west & south-west, forming part of the Sierra Madre, or Mexican Alps, is but little explored. At its remote extremity it consists of an elev. table-land, resembling the vast steppes of Asia except in their superior fertility. The mountain sides are clothed with forests, and there are few, if any districts of country of the same extent as Texas, with so little unproductive land.

There were in this state in 1850, 639,117 acres of land improved, and 10,759,220 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms $16,398,747, & the value of implements & machinery, $2,133,831;—live stock, horses, 75,403; asses & mules, 12,364; milch cows, 214,868; working oxen, 50,482; other cattle, 652,174; sheep, 99,099; swine, 683,604;—value of live stock, $10,267,710. Agricultural products.—Wheat, 41,729 bushels; rye, 3,108; Ind. corn, 5,978,590; oats, 198,717; barley, 4,776; buckwheat, 59; peas and beans, 179,337; potatoes, 93,548; sweet potatoes, 1,322,955; rice, 88,203 pounds; value of products of the orchard, $12,505; produce of market gardens, $12,354; pounds of butter made, 2,308,080; of cheese, 94,619; sugar, hhds., 7,351; molasses, 441,638 gallons; beeswax and honey, 380,682 pounds; wool, 131,374 pounds produced; cotton, 57,596; flax, 1,048; silk cocoons, 22; hops, 7; tobacco, 66,897 pounds; hay, tons of 8,283; clover seeds, 10 bushels; flax seed, 26 bushels; and were made 99 gallons of wine; value of home-made manufac., $255,724; of slaughtered animals, $1,106,088.

The principal rivers in the state are the Sabine, Neches, Trinidad, Brazos, Colorado, Guadaloupe, San Antonia, Nueces, and the Rio Grande. The Neches is navigable for small steamboats for more than 100 m., Trinidad river for 300 or 400 miles, & the Brazos for half that distance. The Rio Colorado is obstructed by a raft 10 m. from its mouth; it will, when removed, be navigable for steamboats 200 miles to Austin City. The San Antonia and Neuces are navigable for only a short distance, but the Rio Grand del Norte, a noble stream, having a course of 1,800 miles, will most probably, though in parts broken by rapids, become hereafter an important commercial channel. Galveston bay, into which the Trinidad flows, is about 35 miles in length, & from 12 to 18 miles wide. The Gulf of Mexico bounds its south-eastern border, on which are many bays & some good harbors. The Texan year is divided into wet & dry seasons; the former lasts from December to March, and the latter from March to Dec. Snow is seldom seen except on the mountains. The country is in most parts covered with a luxuriant native grass, & it is amply supplied with timber, among which are the live oak, white, black, & post oak, hickory, walnut, sycamore, caoutchouc, &c., and on the high lands, pine & cedar. The "Cross Timbers" are two lines of continuous forests of great extent. Cotton and sugar cane are the great agricultural staples, both of which attain to great perfection. The grains chiefly cultivated are Indian corn & wheat. Peaches, melons, figs, oranges, lemons, pine-apples, dates, olives, grapes, &c., grow abundantly. Great numbers of cattle & horses are reared, & vast herds of buffaloes & wild horses wander over the prairies, while deer & game are abundant. Among its minerals are coal of a superior quality, iron ore, limestone, granite, slate, gypsum, &c. Silver mines have been wrought in the mountains, & bitumen & salt are abundant.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 1 woollen factory with a capital invested of $8,000, employing 4 males & 4 females, manufacturing 14,000 yards of cloth, &c., valued at $15,000; 2 establishments with a capital of $16,000, employing 35 persons, & making 200 tons of iron castings, &c., valued at $55,000; 38 flouring and grist mills, 89 saw m., 22 tanneries, 34 printing offices, 3 tri-weekly, 2 semi-weekly, & 32 weekly publications. Capital invested in manufactures, $613,238; value of manufactured articles, $1,202,885.

The principal places in the state are Austin, the capital, Galveston, Houston, Washington, Matagorda, San Felipe de Austin, San Augustine, Nacogdoches, San Antonia de Bexar, Corpus Christi, & Brownville.

There was Jan. 1st, 1854, a railroad in course of construction, length 72 miles.

Education, &c.—The following colleges have been chartered by the legislature, but only three have gone into operation; University of San Augustine at San Augustine, Wesleyan College at San Augustine, Rutersville College at Rutersville, University of Nacogdoches at Nacogdoches, University of Matagorda, University of Galveston, University of De Kalb, Trinity College, Guadaloupe College at Gonzales, & a college at Marshall. There were also 97 academies, 3,389 pupils; 349 schools, 7,946 scholars; there were 12 libraries, agg. number of volumes 4,230.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 82 Baptist churches, 5 Christian, 5 Episcopal, 7 Free, 176 Methodist, 45 Presbyterian, 13 Roman Catholic, 2 Union, & 6 other sects, the whole having 341 churches; total value of church property $204,930.

The governor is elected by the people for two years, but is eligible only 4 years in 6. He must be 32 years of age, & have resided in the state 3 years previous to his election. The lieutenant-governor is chosen in like manner, & for the same time, and must possess the like qualifications. He is president of the senate, & in case of the death, absence, or inability of the governor, exercises the duties of that office. The judicial power of the state is vested in one supreme court, district courts, & such inferior courts as the legislature may appoint. Judges of the supreme court are appointed by the governor with the advice of the senate, & hold their offices for 6 years. The senators are chosen by the people, & act for 4 years, one-half being elected biennially; they must be 32 years of age, and have resided in the state 3 years next preceding the election. The representatives are chosen for 2 years by the people; they must be 21 years of age, & have resided in the state 2 years preceding their election. The legislature meets once in 2 years. Every free male person 21 years of age & a citizen of the U. States, or who was, at the time of the adoption of the constitution of the State of Texas by the congress of the United States, or a citizen of the Republic of Texas, & who shall have resided in this state one year next preceding an election, & the last six months within the county in which he offers his vote (Indians not taxed, Africans and descendants of Africans excepted) has the right of suffrage, but no soldier, seaman, or marine in the army or navy of the United States, shall be entitled to vote.

In 1821, the colonization of Texas was commenced by citizens of the United States. After 3 years of struggle with the govt. of Mexico it finally became independent, April 21st, 1836, & was admitted into the Union as an independent state in 1845.

TIBER (anc. Tybris, Ital. Tevere), a celebrated river of Central Italy, rises in the Tuscan Apennines, 5 miles N. Pieve Santo Stefano, & flows S.S.E. as far as Barberini, within 20 miles of Rome, where it turns S.W., & after a course of 185 miles enters the Mediterranean, 17 m. below Rome, by 2 mouths which enclose a small delta, the ancient Isola Sacra. It is navigable at certain seasons as far as the confl. of the Nera, 30 m. N. Rome. Principal tributaries, the Topino, Nera (anc. Nar), and Teverone (anc. Anio), from the E. the Nestore, Chiana, & Nepi from the W. Its banks are not picturesque; & the stream, usually sluggish, is rapid in spring, & brings down with it a colored muddy deposit, which caused it anciently to be termed the "yellow Tiber." At Rome it is about 300 feet across.

TIBET, or THIBET, an extensive region of Central Asia, included in the Chinese empire, stretching from lon. 78° to 104° E., & from the great chain of the Himalaya to an unascertained distance northward, having N. Chinese Turkestan, the desert of Gobi, & the Ko-konor territory, W. Ladakh, Leh, & the other countries of "Little Tibet," lately belonging to the Sikhs, E. China proper, & S. the territories of Burmah, British India, Bootan, Sikkim, Nepaul, & the Punjab. Pop. supposed to exceed one million. The W. part, which alone has been explored by Europeans, is a lofty tableland, with a very dry climate; the cold, although severe, is not so great as might have been predicted, and the lower limits of the snow line is higher on the N. than on the S. slope of the Himalaya, being estimated at 16,000 to 18,000 feet above the sea level. Nearly all the great rivers of S. Asia rise in this country: the Indus, Sutleje, Brahamputra, Ganges, and Jumna, originate around the region of lat. 31° N., lon. 81° E. Numerous affls. of the Ganges break through the Himalaya also, from W. Tibet. From E. Tibet, which seems to be a maze of mountains, flow the Irrawadi, Menam, & Menam-kong, & here are also some head streams of the Yang-tze-kiang, or great river of China. In the W. half are several lakes of considerable size. The land in W. Tibet, so far as has been discovered, is very bare of trees, or large vegetable products; yet it abounds in game, & other wild animals, & numerous flocks of sheep and goats, the hairy wool of which is used for the manuf. of shawls and other fine fabrics in Cashmere. Barley, peas, and wheat are the chief crops raised; garden vegetables & fruits are in little variety, and the inhabitants live more by pastoral than agricultural pursuits. The yak (bos grunniens), and several other kinds of cattle are reared; horses, mules, & sheep are used as beasts of burden. A fine race of dogs, & the musk deer, a small species, are natives of Tibet. Clay-slate, granite, quartz, & limestone, are chief constituents of the mountain ranges; borax, in great quantity, nitre, rock-salt, lead, silver, copper, gold, turquoise, & lapis-lazuli, are amongst the mineral products; but the great scarcity of fuel forms a serious obstacle to mining and the reduction of metals. Manufs. of woollens, sacking, and other woven fabrics, are pretty general, and much cloth is sent from Lassa into China. The traffic through Tibet is extensive, & mostly monopolized by the government and officers of state. The trade with China is conducted at Lassa & Sin-ning, a town of the Chinese prov. Kan-su, where the Tibetan caravans exchange the native produce and Indian goods for tea, silver bullion, brocades, fruits, tobacco, quicksilver, cinnabar, furs, porcelain, musical instruments, pearls, and coral. Nepaul & Bootan derive all their Chinese goods through Tibet; and from the former & Bengal, English & Indian piece goods, sugar, tobacco, indigo, paper, rice, spices, sandal-wood, & gums, are received: from Assam, silk, iron, & stick lac; from Chinese Turkestan, horses & camels; from Ladakh, dried fruits, shawls, gamboge, saffron, copper, tobacco, & timber. The roads & bridges are far inferior to those of China. Tibet, which became subordinate to China in 1648, is politically divided into E., or Hither, & W., or Ulterior Tibet, each ruled by a minister from Pe-king, in conjunction with the ecclesiastical heads of the country, the Dalai-lama, at Lassa, the E. cap., & the Bantchin-erdeni, at Teshoo-Lombo, the W. capital. Tibet is the head quarters of Buddhism, which here exists in greatest purity. The country abounds with temples, and it is stated that 84,000 lamas, or priest, are supported at the expense of the government. Amongst the inhabitants there are believed to be about 8,000 Roman Catholics. The Chinese armed force consists of 60,000 men, of whom 50,000 are infantry. The pop., like the other inhabs. of the table land of Central Asia, are of the Mongolian race. Besides Lassa & Teshoo-Lombo, the chief towns are Shigatze, Jiga-Gounggar, Natan, &c., of which we know little except the names.

TIMBUCTOO, or TOMBUCTOO, a town of Central Africa, Soudan, near the border of the Desert Sahara, 8 miles N. the Joliba (Niger), lat. 17° 10′ N., lon. 2° W. (?). Pop. 12,000 (?), principally Negroes, with some Moors. It is a very poor town, in a wretched country, situated amid burning and moving sands, on the verge of a morass. The walled enclosure, about 3 m. in circumference, contains some brick houses, but most of the dwellings are mere circular huts or wigwams of straw and earth. Among its mosques are 2 with towers and walls about 15 feet in height. Provisions have to be brought from Jenné, on the Niger, about 300 m. S.W.; & the sole importance of Timbuctoo is due to its being an entrepôt for the trade between Guinea, Senegambia, & N. Africa. Caravans from Morocco & the other Barbary states here exchange dates, European manufs., fire-arms, gunpowder, coral, tobacco, and paper, for slaves, gold dust, salt, ostrich feathers, gums, & palm oil. It was twice taken and held by the Moors, but is now governed by a native chieftain.

TIMOR, an island of the Malay Archipelago, betw. lat. 8° & 10° 20′ S., and lon. 123° 30′ & 127° E., separated from N.W. Australia by the Timor Sea. Length 300 m.; breadth 40 to 70 m. Estimated area, 8,800 sq. m. Pop. 1849, 1,057,800. It appears to be very populous; in the interior the inhabitants are mostly of the Papuan Negro race; on the coast Malays, with an intermixture of Dutch and Portuguese settlers. It is traversed in its length by a mountain chain, partly covered with forests; in the interior are some fertile plains, where wheat & other products, not common in the Archipelago, are raised. Around the coasts every spot of ground admitting of cultivation, appears to be occupied, & the country is covered with dwellings and plantations. Principal exports are sandal-wood sent to China, bees'-wax to Java, & cattle, horses, maize, and sago, to the Australian colonies, Mauritius, and Singapore, in return for muskets, gunpowder, hardwares, calicoes, & other British manufs., which constitute the chief imports, besides rice, arrack, and other native produce from Java & Macassar. British ships frequently visit Timor, chiefly homeward-bound whalers, as also Dutch ships & native vessels. Sago is the chief article of food; millet, maize, yams, sweet potatoes, & cotton, are raised; gold, copper, & rock salt are met with, but no mines are wrought. Pearls are fished off the S.W. extremity of the island. The Dutch possess the settlement of Coepang in the S.W., which is a free port. Dilli, on the N.W. coast, is a settlement belonging to the Portuguese, & is surrounded by a very fertile territory, but unhealthy for Europeans. In these settlements the natives are said to be Christians; in the interior the great majority are idolaters.

TIMOR-LAUT, an island of the Malay Archipelago, between lat. 7° 10′ & 8° 30′ S., lon. 131° & 131° 40′ E., 260 m. E. Timor. Length 90 m. Surface mntnous. & wooded.

TOLEDO, Toletum, a famous city of Spain, & its cap. under the Goths & Moors, now cap. prov. Toledo, in the centre of the Iberian peninsula, on the Tagus, here crossed by two noble bridges, and by which it is nearly surrounded, 41 miles S.S.W. Madrid. Lat. 39° 52′ 24″ N., lon. 4° 49′ W. Pop. said to have amounted formerly to 200,000, was in 1845, 13,431. It is situated on a rocky height, and has an excessive climate, very cold in winter, and hot in summer. It is surrounded by a Moorish wall, flanked by numerous towers, & has many steeples. Streets and squares are narrow, irregular, ill-paved, & dull. It is, however, clean, being supplied with plenty of cisterns. The cathedral of Toledo, the metropolitan church of Spain, founded in 587, is 404 feet in length, 204 feet in width, with a lofty tower & spire. Many of its paintings have been transferred to the national gallery at Madrid, & much of the wealth of the cathedral, in gold, silver, & jewels, has been applied to secular uses. The Alcazar, the former residence both of Moorish & Castilian monarchs, is an extensive pile of three stories, surmounted by a balustrade. Outside of the city is a public walk, adorned with statues. Toledo has a university, 4 colleges, numerous hospitals & asylums, including two for foundlings & lunatics, a handsome town-hall, & a mint. Toledo has long been famous for its manufs. of sword-blades; and though it now only employs about 70 hands, great skill is still shown in tempering the blades. It has also manufs. of coarse woollens, paper, guitar strings, coarse glass & leather. An amphitheatre & some walls of the ancient Toletum still attest its importance under the Romans. It was taken by the Goths in 467, & by the Moors in 714, & retained by the last till 1085, when it was permanently annexed to the crown of Castile. Between the 5th and 9th centuries, it was the seat of several general ecclesiastical councils. Pop. of prov. 1849, 330,000.

TORO (BOCA DEL), or "Bull's Mouth," C. Amer., is one of the straits by which the lagoon of Chiriqui communicates with the Caribbean Sea. The lagoon, or harbor of Boca del Toro, extends inland in one place upwards of seventy miles, with deep water. It was surveyed about sixty years ago by the English government, & forms a portion of the territory of New Granada. The town of Boca del Toro, consisting of about 50 houses, was first settled by the Creoles about twenty-five years since. These people are scattered over the various islands in the lagoon, leading an easy & pleasant life; very little exertion is required for the actual necessities of life. Turtle are abundant. Bananas & plantains are a substitute for bread, & fruit & vegetables abound. The principal commerce of the lagoon, however, is in sarsaparilla, collected in the first instance by the Indians, by them sold or bartered to traders, & then transferred to the stores in Boca del Toro. The total export is about 12,000 pounds annually. A prettier place than the lagoon, surrounded by its high mountains, prominent amongst which is Chiriqui volcano, about 7,500 feet high, it is impossible to imagine. The climate is stated to be admirable, though warm, of course, & by no means unhealthy. Several ways are open for successful enterprise, to those possessed of the necessary capital & courage to overcome the difficulties occasioned by a want of labor, severely felt all over the isthmus.

TORONTO, p-o., Vermilion co., Ia., 81 W. Indianapolis, 652 W.

TORONTO, city, and one of the capitals of Canada, is situated on Toronto bay, in the township & co. of York, lat. 43° 32′ N., lon. 79° 20′ W. It is 45 N.E. Hamilton, 165 W. from Kingston, 363 from Montreal, 543 from Quebec, and 1,353 from Halifax, N. S.

The bay is a beautiful sheet of water, separated from the main body of Lake Ontario, except at its entrance, by a long narrow strip of sandy beach, the S. W. termination of which is known as "Gibraltar Point." The city was founded in 1794 by Governor Simcoe, and is laid out in the form of a parallelogram, being above 3 miles long by 1¼ mile wide, the streets, which are strait & wide, intersecting at right angles. The esplanade fronting the bay extends for a distance of 2 m. In 1817, the population amounted to 1,200; in 1830, to 2,860; in 1842, to 15,336; in 1850, to 25,166; in 1852, to 30,763; & in 1854, to over 40,000. The city is lighted with gas, and is well supplied with water, by companies incorporated for those purposes. The Bank of Upper Canada has its head office here, & there are agencies of the Montreal, Brit. North America, Commercial Bank of Kingston, & City Bank of Montreal; there is also an institution called the Farmer's Joint-Stock Bank, & there are 2 Savings' Banks. The head offices of the British America (Fire & Marine), Provincial Mutual and General (Fire and Marine), and the Canada Western (Fire) Assurance Companies are in Toronto, as is also that of the Canada Company, which has nearly two millions of acres of land for sale situated in various parts of the province. The offices of the Toronto & Guelph, & of the Ontario, Simcoe & Huron r. r. companies, are likewise at Toronto. There are agencies of over 30 other life, fire, or marine assurance companies, & there are 8 building societies. The principal public buildings are, St. James' Church (the English cathedral), St. Michael's Church (the Roman Cath. cathedral), the University of Toronto, the St. Lawrence Hall & Market, the Parliament House, Osgoode Hall, the Court-house, Trinity College, Upper Canada College, the Lunatic Asylum, the National School, & the Jail. The buildings of the various banks are also worthy of notice, & the shops, stores, & private residences, are not surpassed in elegance, magnitude or convenience, in any city of its size in North America. The churches number 24, viz., 1 Baptist, 1 Catholic Apostolic, 1 Disciples of Christ, 5 Church of England, 1 Church of Scotland, 1 Scotch Free Church, 1 United Presbyterian, 1 Irish Presbyterian, 4 Wesleyan, 1 Congregational, 1 Methodist New Connection, 1 Primitive Wesleyan, 2 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian, 1 African Baptist, and 1 African Wesleyan. The University of Toronto has 10 professors & 1 lecturer in the faculties of law, arts, and languages, whilst Trinity College (in connection with the Church of England) has 7 professors in the faculty of medicine, & 6 in the faculties of law & arts. The Toronto School of Medicine has 6 lecturers, & is recognized by McGill College at Montreal, as preparing gentlemen for graduating at that institution. The other educational establishments are, Upper Canada College, which has a principal and 13 masters; Knox's College, which has 2 divinity professors & a classical tutor; the Congregational Institute, with 2 divinity professors; the United Presbyterian Divinity Hall, with 1 professor; St. Michael's (Roman Catholic) College, under the charge of the brothers of the order of St. Basil; the Provincial normal and model schools, with 12 teachers; the Toronto Academy, which has 8 masters, & the co. of York Grammar School, which has 5 masters. There is also a public school in each ward, & there are numerous first-class private schools. The benevolent institutions are, the Toronto Hospital; the Lunatic Asylum; the Eye Dispensary; the General Dispensary & Lying-in Hospital; the Provincial Lying-in Hospital and Vaccine Institution, & the Maternity Lying-in Hospital. These institutions, the Lunatic Asylum excepted, are mostly supported by voluntary contributions, with, occasionally, some assistance from govt. The national societies, consisting of a St. George's, a St. Andrew's, & a St. Patrick's Society, may also be classed with the benevolent institutions, as they are ever active in their charities when the occasion offers. The mercantile & literary societies are, the Board of Trade; the Stock Exchange; the Athenæum & News Room, & the Mechanics' Institute. There is also a Philharmonic Society, a Society of Arts, a Typographical Society, a Horticultural Society, & a Female Emigration Society. There are 3 daily, 2 tri-weekly, 3 semi-weekly, & 13 weekly newspapers published here, & there are 9 monthly magazines and periodicals. The city communicates by electric telegraph with every town of importance in Canada & the United States, & the lines of r. r. already constructed or in progress, will place Toronto in direct communication with nearly every important town in N. Amer.

Toronto has a constant steamboat intercourse, during the season of navigation, with the various ports on the great lakes and the river St. Lawrence, & stages leave the city daily throughout the year, for all the principal inland towns in Western Canada. The markets of Toronto are well supplied with every description of provisions of the best quality at very moderate prices, & house rents, except in the principal business streets (such as King street, Yonge street, Front street, Church street, &c., where good business stands let at from £150 to £300 per annum), are reasonable.

Property in Toronto has become greatly enhanced in value within the last few years, the price having in many instances more than doubled; the wages of labor of every description have also advanced steadily, & the trade and commerce of the city have fully kept pace with its increase in population. The value of imports in 1852 was £639,317; of exports, £134,211, & the duties collected amounted to £93,304. The value of imports in 1853 was £920,739, & the duties collected amounted to £156,026, which shows Toronto to be next to Montreal in the import trade of the province. The value of property as assessed, within the corporation limits, is about £3,250,000, or thirteen millions of dollars.

No town in Canada has advanced so rapidly in wealth & population as Toronto, & the probabilities are, that at the next decennial census, in 1862, it will rank second to no city in British America. The city is divided into 7 wards, which return 2 aldermen and 2 councillors for each, who, from among themselves, elect the mayor. It also returns 2 mems. to the Provincial Parliament, & the superior courts of law for Canada West hold their sittings here, in a large and elegant building called Osgoode Hall. There is a city recorder, whose court is held 4 times in the year, and there are 8 fire companies in the city, who are under the direction of 1 chief & 2 assistant engineers; each company having also a captain of its own election.

The city was incorporated in 1834, & divided into 3 wards, & was the seat of the parliament and superior courts of Upper Canada till the union of the Upper & Lower provs. in 1841, when the seat of government was removed to Kingston, & thence to Montreal. It was founded in 1794, & suffered severely by fire in 1813, & also in 1849.

TRANSPADANE REPUBLIC, a state formed in Italy by Napoleon, in 1796, of part of Lombardy and Venetia; in 1797, it was incorporated with the Cisalpine Republic.

TRANSYLVANIA, v., Sugar Creek t., Greene co., O., 68 W.S.W. Columbus, 481 W. Situated on Little Miami r., & was laid out in 1829.

TRANSYLVANIA (Germ. Siebenburgen, "the seven towns"), the most E. prov. of the Austrian empire, with the title of Grand Principality, between lat. 45° 30′ & 47° 40′ N., & lon. 22° 15′ & 26° E., having W. & N. Hungary & the Bukovina, E. the Bukovine and Moldavia, S. Walachia, from which it is separated by the main range of the Carpathian mountains. Area, 21,160 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 2,073,737. Surface mostly covered by ramifications of the Carpathians, & Mount Buschtch, near Kronstadt, is 8,700 feet in height. Principal rivers, the Szamos in the N.; Maros, with its affls. the Kukels, in the centre; & the Aluta in the S. The banks of these rivers are densely wooded, especially those of the Maros, & hence the prov. derived its name, signifying a forest region. These forests yield valuable timber. Soil very various. Climate on the mountains rude, but in the valleys as mild as that of N. Italy, & a surplus of corn over the home-consumption is raised. Chief crops, wheat, barley, oats, rye, buckwheat, maize, pulse, potatoes, fruits, tobacco, flax, hemp, saffron, & wine. The rearing of horses, sheep, & other live stock, is important. In the Szekler country is a breed of hardy ponies, similar to the Welsh, & the horses elsewhere have been much improved. Buffaloes are used for field labor; the bear, wolf, & an abundance of game roam in the forests; in which also great numbers of hogs are fed. The most remarkable mineral product is rock-salt, a bed of which extends from Walachia through Transylvania to Galicia, covering a space of 570 m. in length, & from 60 to 80 m. in breadth; 1,500,000 cwts. of salt are procured annually from mines; there are, besides, 120 salt springs. Gold, silver, iron, lead, copper, antimony, arsenic, mercury, alum, sulphur, nitre, gems, & marble, are amongst the chief mineral products. Twenty-two gold mines are wrought, & nearly every stream in the country is auriferous. The annual produce of gold is 2,500 merks, of which 1,800 is obtained from washings. Silver yields annually 5,000 merks. Manufs. of woollen & cotton stuffs are carried on at Kronstadt, & Hermanstadt in the Saxon-land; but, in general, manufactures are only domestic, & the exports consist of salt, corn, cattle, horses, hides, wax, honey, timber, metals, & other raw produce, in return for manufactured goods, woven fabrics, jewellery, hats, glasswares, &c. The trade is mostly in the hands of Greeks and Armenians. The Maros & Szamos rivers serve as the chief routes for conveyance of goods. Roads are almost impassable; except in a few towns, inns are unknown. The peasantry generally, especially those of the Greek church, are more depressed & ignorant than those of Hungary, except in the Saxon-land in the S. This part of Transylvania derives its name from having been settled by colonies from Lower Saxony, in the 12th century. The Szeklers occupy the E. part of the country, & the other portion is termed the Magyar-land, from its predominant people. It is divided into 5 circles, viz., Hermanstadt, Carlsbourg, Klausenburg, Deès & Maros-Vasarhely. No country in the world has, within so small a compass, so great a variety in its pop. These comprise 14 distinct races, of which the three principal are Hungarians, Szeklers, & Saxons; the others are Walachians, German colonists, Bulgarians, Armenians, Greeks, Russians, Poles, Jews, Gypsies, and Moravians. Of the population 221,400 are Roman Catholics, 605,300 belonging to the Greek church, 725,700 Greek Nonconformists, 220,400 Augsburg Protestants, 358,300 Reformed Prot., 44,600 Unitarians, and 7,000 Jews. The Roman Catholics have a lyceum at Klausenburg, & 9 gymnasia; & the Protestants have 4 colleges, or large gymnasia, the chief of which is at Nagy-Enyed, & 9 smaller gymnasia; the Unitarians, a college at Glausenburg, 2 gymnasia, & several schools. Transylvania lately sent members to the Hungarian diet, besides having a diet of its own. The country in 1848 & 1849 was the seat of protracted warfare, during which it is estimated that 200 towns & villages were burned, & 10,000 of the population perished. Transylvania was annexed to the Austrian empire by Joseph II. in 1699. [HUNGARY.]

TREBIZONDE, or TREBISOND (PASHALIC OF), a subdivision of Turkish Armenia, extending along the coast of the Black Sea, between lat. 40° 50′ & 41° 50′ N., & lon. 38° & 42° E.; having landward the district Guriel & the pashs. Akhaltzikh, Kars, Erzeroum, & Sivas. Surface mostly mountainous, and the coast-line clothed with dense forests, rises to from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea. Many tracts are highly fertile & well cultivated; & it produces large quantities of wheat, barley, & maize, with hemp, flax, tobacco, wool, honey, wax, fruits, charcoal, & timber, which, with some linen cloths, carpets, leather, soap, salted fish, wine, tar, & leeches, form the chief exports. Its E. part, called Lazistan, is destitute of towns, from being inhabited by Lazes, a rude people, numbering about 50,000. Principal towns, Trebizond, Kerasun, Tirchboli, Rizah, & Batum, all on its coast.—Trebizonde (anc. Trapezus), the cap., is an important fortified seaport city, on the S.E. coast of the Black Sea, 120 m. N.W. Erzeroum. Lat. 41° 1′ N., lon. 39° 46′ E. Estimated population from 25,000 to 30,000, of whom from 20,000 to 24,000 are Mohammedans, inhabiting the walled city. It stands on the slope of a hill facing the sea, enclosed by a lofty castellated barrier, & further defended by a citadel on an adjacent height. Outside of the walls are deep ravines, filled with gardens and crossed by long bridges; besides several suburbs, in which are most of the Christian dwellings, with the principal bazaars & khans. Houses mostly of 1 story, built of stone & lime, roofed with red tiles, & so much interspersed with gardens & plantations that scarcely a house is visible from the sea. It has about 20 Greek churches, & nearly all its mosques have been formerly Christian places of worship; that of St. Sophia, about 1 mile distant, is a handsome edifice. Trebizond has a fort on either side of a peninsula projecting into the Black Sea. From its position, the city is the natural entrepôt of the trade of Armenia, N. Persia, & Georgia, with Europe; and owing to the establishment of steam navigation on the Black Sea, & between Trebizond and Constantinople, its trade has lately received a remarkable extension. Its exports consist chiefly of silk, wool, tobacco, wax, galls, oil, opium & other drugs; honey, butter, timber for ship-building, the produce of Asia-Minor, & silk fabrics; Cashmere shawls, carpets, saffron, cotton, camel-skins from Persia. Annual exports $2,400,000, exclusive of specie forwarded to the Turkish capital. Annual imports $6,000,000; consisting of cotton goods, spices, & iron from Great Britain; hardwares & glass from Germany; wines from France; corn from Russia; fire-arms, tin, salt, 3-4ths of all which are destined for Persia. At this city, Xenophon & the Ten Thousand Greeks reached the sea in their memorable retreat. From 1203, until the subversion of the Eastern Empire, Trebizond was the cap. of an independent dom., extending from the Phasis to the Halys.

TRENTON, city, Mercer co., N. J., & capital of the state, is situated on the left bank of the Delaware, opposite the falls, 10 miles S.W. from Princeton; 26 S. W. from New Brunswick; 29 N.E. from Philadelphia; 57 S.W. from New York; 166 from W. The population in 1810, was 3,003; in 1820, 3,942; in 1830, 3,925; in 1840, 4,035; in 1850, 6,463. The city is at the head of steamboat & sloop navigation, & on the New Jersey railroad, & its continuation, the Philadelphia & Trenton railroad; & the Belvidere & Delaware railroad. It is regularly laid out, has many handsome public and private buildings, & is well lighted with gas. The villages of Mill Hill, Bloomsbury, & Lamberton, combined in the borough of South Trenton, extending a mile & a half down the Delaware, are suburbs of the city, & in a general description, should be considered as belonging to it; they, together, contain a population of 8,000. In the city proper, there are a state house, 100 feet by 60, built of stone, & stuccoed in imitation of granite; it is beautifully situated on the bank of the Delaware, & commanding a fine view of the river, & the surrounding scenery; a house for the residence of the governor of the state; & 3 fire-proof offices, a city hall, the state lunatic asylum, the state library, established in 1750, a lyceum, 20 churches,—Baptist, Dutch Reformed, Episcopal, Friends, Methodist, Presbyterian, & Roman Catholic,—2 banks with an aggregate cap. of $310,000, several extensive manufacturing establishments, tanneries, potteries, paper fac., rope fac., flouring m., saw m., 3 printing offices issuing 2 daily & 3 weekly newspapers. Capital employed in manufac., 1850, $350,950; value of manufac. articles, $597,486.

At the foot of the falls or rapids a fine covered bridge crosses the Delaware, 1,100 feet long, resting on five arches, supported on stone piers;—& the railroad viaduct. The Delaware & Raritan canal, forming a sloop navigation from Trenton to Brunswick, passes through the city, & is here entered by a feeder taken from the Delaware, 23 miles above the city. The canal crosses the Assunpink creek E. of the town in a fine stone aqueduct. Above the falls the Delaware is navigable for large boats as far as Easton, which adds much to the commercial advantages of Trenton. The State Prison, a massy building, is in South Trenton. A company chartered in 1831, with a capital of $200,000, for the purpose of taking the water from the river by means of a dam & race-way, & carrying it along & below the city, with outlets for mills, has made available an immense water power, which is used for manufacturing purposes. The Assunpink creek also, which enters the Delaware below the city, furnishes some water power.

This town was first settled about the year 1720. It is memorable for the "Battle of Trenton," December 25th, 1776, when 909 Hessians were captured by the Americans under General Washington. That was a gloomy period of the revolutionary war, & this event contributed greatly to revive the hopes of the people. Trenton was incorporated as a city in 1792.

Pop. of the circle 1850, 82,596. Mean temp. of year 55°.3; winter 39°.4; summer 71°.4, Fahr. It consists of an old town built on the declivity of a steep hill, crowned by a nearly ruined castle, and enclosed by old walls; & the new town, or Theresienstadt, Josephstadt, & the Franzenvorstadt, bordering the sea on a plane at its foot. It has altogether a thriving appearance, and its streets are crowded with men of all European nations. The new town especially is well built, & few cities on the continent can vie with it in the solidity & comfort of its private dwellings. Between the old and new town winds the Corso, a spacious thoroughfare, opening successively into several handsome squares, in the principal of which are a fine public fountain, the chief hotel, & the column & statue of the Emperor Charles VI., to whom Triest owes its modern importance. Principal edifices are the exchange, a vast new building; the cathedral in the old town, several other Roman Catholic, & 2 Greek churches, all fine and richly-adorned structures, two Protestant churches, the synagogue, an English chapel, a gigantic hospital, large and several minor theatres, governor's palace, barracks, post-house, dockyard, lazarettos, custom-house, & terrace of the casino, ornamented by statues. The harbor, formed by the Theresian mole, is small, but secure and convenient; it is bordered by a wide stone quay, close to which vessels of 300 tons burden can anchor, and on its N. side is a quarantine dock, surrounded with hotels, and every other convenience. The city is partially intersected by the Maria Theresa canal, by means of which vessels can load and unload at the doors of the warehouses. Triest is a free port, & is for S. Germany what Hamburg is for N. Germany, being the great emporium for the trade of the Austrian Empire by the Adriatic. Principal exports are corn, rice, wine, oil, shumac, tobacco, wax, hemp, wool, skins, furs, metals, timber, & all kinds of manuf'd. & other produce. It is a depôt for warehousing goods from the Black Sea, Turkey, & Egypt, & of late the route through it has been successfully employed for the transit of the overland mails between England & India. It possesses a large mercantile navy, and the Austrian Lloyd's has 27 steam-packets. Barca, W. Tunis, & S. Fezzan & the Libyan desert. Estimated area of Tripoli Proper (including Sert), 100,-000 sq. m., & pop. 1,800,000. The coast line, which presents few inlets, is of the most luxuriant fertility for a few miles inland, beyond which the whole country is little better than a sandy waste, the rivers of Tripoli being mere torrents. Products of the coast are corn & fruits, in great variety; cotton, silk, tobacco, saffron, madder, & castor oil; in the interior, senna, dates, & galls, are the chief sources of wealth, & the cassob & lotus are indigenous. The surplus produce of the date & olive plantations, with straw mats, earthen jars, & other domestic manufs., are partly exported by sea & partly disposed of to Bedouin traders. Wine of superior quality might be produced. Cattle, sheep, & poultry, are sent to Malta. Rock-salt is an important article of export. Principal manufs. are carpets, thick cloaks, & other articles of clothing; camlets, goats' hair, sacking, prepared skins, morocco leather, earthenwares, & potash. Foreign commerce is mostly with Malta, Tunis, & the Levant; & the chief trade is in the barter of European goods for those of Cent. Africa, whence several caravans arrive annually with slaves, gold dust, ivory, senna, & natron. Tripoli is stated to be the most civilized of the Barbary states. State religion Mohammedanism. Government, since 1835, exercised by a Pasha, a vassal of the Porte.—Tripoli, anc. Œa, the cap., is a fortified maritime city, on a low rocky promontory extending into the Mediterranean. Lat. (of castle) 32° 53′ 9″ N., lon. 13° 11′ E. Pop. estimated at 15,500; viz., 12,000 of Turkish descent, 1,500 Christians, & 2,000 Jews. It is much smaller than either Algiers or Tunis. Its white buildings, mosques environed with plantations, & baths surmounted by cupolas, give it a handsome appearance from the sea, & it is said to be clean & well regulated. Principal edifices, the citadel with the residency of the pasha & a dockyard, some fine mosques, several synagogues, churches, market places, & European hotels. It has a magnificent triumphal arch, erected A.D. 164, in honor of Aurelius Antoninus & Verus, besides other remains of antiquity. TRIPOLI, or TARABLUS, Tripolis, a seaport town of Syria, cap. pash., on the Mediterranean, at the foot of a spur of Mount Lebanon, & at the mouth of the Kadisha, 46 m. N.E. Beyrout. Lat. 34° 25′ 4″ N., lon. 35° 49′ E. Pop. 15,000. It is neatly built, and surrounded by fine gardens, but the marshy character of its vicinity renders it unhealthy. Houses chiefly of stone, & the town has many remains of middle-age architecture; in & around it are numerous granitic columns & traces of antiquity, & an old castle stands on an adjacent height. Tripoli doubtless owed its name to its consisting of three distinct towns, while the Marina or El Mina, the principal seat of trade, is a separate quarter S.W.ward, on a projecting point of land bordering the port. The harbor is small, shallow, and frequently unsafe, but Tripoli retains some export trade in silk, wool, cotton, tobacco, galls, cochineal, & soap. Tripoli is a Greek bishop's see, & the residence of several European consuls. It was taken by the Crusaders in 1108, at which time a large & valuable library was consigned to the flames.—II. a ruined city of Asia-Minor, Anatolia, near the Mendere, 36 m. S.E. Allah-Shehr. TROY, city, port of entry, & capital of Rensselaer co., N. Y. It is pleasantly situated on the left bank of Hudson river, and at the North termination of the Hudson river railroad, where it connects with the Troy & Schenectady, the Rensselaer & Saratoga, the Troy, Whitehall & Castleton, the Troy & Boston, and the Albany & Rutland railroads. It is 6 N. Albany, 151 N. New York, 376 W. It is in 42° 44′ N. lat., 73° 40′ W. lon., 3° 15′ E. lon. from W. Pop. 1810, 3,895; 1820, 5,264; 1830, 11,405; 1840, 19,334; in 1850, 28,785, and in 1854, including West Troy, 40,000. Its limits extend about 3 miles along the river, and its breadth is 1½ miles. The plat includes an alluvial flat, somewhat raised above the level of the river, & bordered on the E. by hills of considerable elevation, from which descend two considerable streams, denominated Poesten Kill, & Wyant's Kill, which have romantic cataracts & cascades, & afford extensive watrr power for mills & machinery. The city is laid out with great regularity. The main business street, called River-street, follows the course of the river & is curved, but the other streets are straight & cross each other at right angles. The streets are generally 60 feet wide, well paved and have good sidewalks, & are generally ornamented by trees & well lighted with gas. The houses are mostly built of brick, & with great neatness & taste, & a number of the public & private buildings are elegant. The court house is a large marble building with a fine Grecian front of the Doric order. There is a brick jail, & a county poorhouse with a farm of 200 acres. The Rensselaer Institute is designed to give a scientific and practical education, & the Troy Female Institute has been very celebrated. There are also several other schools of a high order. There is a Lyceum of Natural History, with a valuable library, & a cabinet of minerals & natural history; a Young Men's Association, with a large library, cabinet, & reading room. There are in the city 2 excellent market-houses. There are 25 churches, some of which are elegant structures,—3 Baptist, 4 Episcopal, 1 Friend's, 3 Methodist, 8 Presbyterian, 3 Roman Catholic, 2 Universalist, & 1 Colored congregation. There are 6 banks with an aggregate capital of $1,765,000, a savings' bank, & 2 insurance companies.

Troy is well situated for commerce. Being at the head of tidewater on the Hudson, sloops & steamboats come to its wharves. Numerous sloops, steamboats, & barges are engaged in the trade between this city and New York. Troy has a rich & extensive back country to the N. & N.E., with which it is connected by fine roads, & it also participates in the advantages of the Erie & the Champlain canals. It has 4 furnaces, 8 forges, & machine shops, an augur fac., a hinge fac., 2 brass foundries, 3 fulling m., a woollen fac., 7 cotton fac., an India rubber goods fac., a plane fac., 4 tanneries, 5 breweries, a pottery, 2 rope fac., 13 flouring m., 2 saw m., 3 paper fac., 4 printing offices, 2 daily, & 4 weekly newspapers pub. Cap. employed in manufac., 1850, $2,700,100; value of manufactured articles, $7,780,860.

The water power of Troy is great. It is derived not only from the streams which flow from the hills on the E., but a dam with a lock across the Hudson, is not only valuable for navigation, but renders most of the water of the river avilable for manufacturing purposes. The city is abundantly supplied with pure and wholesome water from a reservoir in the N. part of the city, supplied from a creek, & is conveyed in iron pipes through the city, supplying not only families, but fountains & hydrants, from which the water can be thrown, by its pressure alone, over the highest houses. Troy was incorporated as a city in 1816. In 1820 a disastrous fire swept over & destroyed the richest & most important part of the city.

West Troy, Watervliet t., on the W. side of the Hudson r., though in a different county, is properly a suburb of Troy, with which it is connected by a bridge & two ferries, & the Albany, Troy, & Rutland railroad passes through it. This growing village was incorporated in 1836, & contains 800 dwelling houses, & 5,000. inhabs. It has 10 churches; the Watervliet bank, with a capital of $150,000; and an extensive United States Arsenal. In the N. part of the village, the S. branch of the Mohawk unites with the Hudson, & here is a lateral canal, by which the Erie canal enters the river; & there is a second lateral canal a mile below. The waters of this S. lateral canal pass through the grounds of the Arsenal, comprising about 100 acres, enclosed on 3 sides by an iron fence, and in the rear by a stone wall, containing a large number of buildings; and an extensive water power is here afforded by the waste water of the canal, for the use of the establishment. About 200 officers, soldiers & workmen, are attached to the Arsenal, & manufacture arms & munitions of war, to the amount of $[illegible] annually. There is an extensive bell foundry, in which 1,000 bells are cast annually, averaging in weight 600 lbs. each. In the yards of the Arsenal are found cannon which were captured at Saratoga and at Yorktown, and others cast in New York and Philadelphia during the revolution.

TULANG-BAVANG, a river and town of Sumatra; the river enters the sea of Java after an E. course of 100 m.; town, 70 m. S.S.E. Palembang.

TULARE, co., Cal. Situated toward the S.E. part of the state. Area, 10,000 sq. m. Drained by Kings r., "The Four Creeks," Tule river & Kern river. Surface various; much of the lands bordering the Tulare lake on the E. is said to be exceedingly fertile. Cap. Tulare Lake City. Pop. 1852, 8,575, of whom 8,408 were Indians.

TULARE, or TULE LAKE, Cal. "The Tulare Lake is 30 miles across in the widest part, & 50 miles in length—it being difficult to define its exact length, owing to the dense growth of tules at each end. Travelling down on the west side, from the upper or south end of the lake, in a northwesterly direction, you gradually approach the Coast Range Mountains, until at a distance of about 20 miles from the upper end, the lake & the base of the mountains are not more than a mile apart, & continue so for about two miles, then both receding until you arrive at the lower end, where they are twenty or twenty-five miles apart. For the first fifteen or sixteen miles the shores of the lake are low, muddy alkali soil, & the water shallow for some distance out; but nearer the base of the mountains the margin becomes higher, with a grass bank of about 18 inches elevation, & a narrow sand beach deepening suddenly. The Indians say that it is very deep. On the west side of the lake, & running parallel with the shore, there is generally a narrow belt or strip of tule, distant about two hundred yards, but not high enough to obstruct the view of the lake, which presents, in most places, an open sheet of water similar to the ocean in a calm, although at the calmest time, at daylight in the morning, when there was not a breath of air stirring, I have noticed ripples, or apparently a slight ground-swell, breaking on the beach. Near the base of the mountains the shore is still more elevated, forming in many places a bluff bank three ft. high, & about twenty yards from the margin a table land ten or twelve feet above the water, which, if the soil was only better, with some scattering groves of oaks, would form beautiful places for settlement; but there is not a tree in sight. These banks, of eighteen inches & three feet high, continue for five or six miles, when the shore again becomes low, muddy, & in many places very boggy, until you arrive at the lower end of the lake. The distance from this point is a straight line down the slough to the river San Joaquin is about 40 miles, & at least thirty miles of that a tule swamp, from one to three or four miles wide, with some few willow trees in it. The timber of King's river in visible on the east side of the lake.

I have been told that about ten miles from the San Joaquin the water from the tule swamp falls about two feet, & forms the slough that empties into the San Joaquin; at this place it can be crossed just above the fall, with wagons. The water in the slough below is now fifteen or twenty feet deep.

There is a good wagon road from the Tejon Pass, down on the west side of the lakes, &, as far as we have travelled it, level & tolerably firm, but the grass is not good. The soil on the west side of the slough is superior to any we have seen since we left Tule river, it being similar to the best lands in the neighborhood of Stockton & French Camp; but there is no timber. On the east side of the lake, north of Tule river, for about six miles, the land generally speaking is very good, but rather cut up by sloughs. The timbered land, which is principally oak, commences one or two miles east of the lake, & continues up the sides & sloughs to the mountains, with some intermissions & open land. As far as I went, the shores of the lake were low and muddy, the water shallow, & the tules extending out some distance. South of Tule river, the margin of the lake for twelve or fifteen miles is low & muddy, with only a few scattering bunches of tules, the water shallow for at least half a mile out, it being not more than knee deep. On the south-east margin, the shore for five or six miles has a grass bank of twelve or eighteen inches elevation, with a narrow sand beach; the land is a low alkali soil, unfit for cultivation, & no timber on it. From what I could see of Kern Lake slough, I should judge that there is an open communication between the lakes, as the slough where we crossed it, (30 miles south-east of Tulare Lake,) is 25 or 30 feet deep, & 120 feet wide, with a strong current, & where we attempted to run a line through the tule land, eight miles south of the lake, we found swimming water. I think that a small boat & three or four men with oars & a sail could go through the north end of Kern Lake to the north end of Tulare Lake in abt. twenty-four hours. Ten miles south of Tulare Lake, & a little east of the slough, is a small lake five or six miles long, & about two miles wide, which runs into the tules. The Coast Range Mountains are generally destitute of timber, except in a few arroyos & gulches, there is some cottonwood, willow & oak. A little south of the seventh standard line there appeared to be pine & oak timber on the summit. All the water we found possessed some mineral properties. The Rocky Mountain sheep inhabit the Coast Range, which fact we were not aware of until we found their heads & horns near the watering places. We did not see any of them, but men who hunt there say that in some places there are a good many."—C. D. Gibbes' survey. Very little is known outside of its immediate neighborhood of the character & extent of Tulare Lake, & the swamps and lakes in its vicinity. During the rainy season, the water of these lakes overflows into the San Joaquin, & a charter has been granted by the legislature to open a canal between them, by which it is expected the San Joaquin will be made deeper, and, perhaps, navigation opened as far as the head of the lake.

TUNIS, a beylik or regency of N. Africa, between lat. 31° & 37° N., & lon. 8° & 11° E., having W. Algeria, S. & S.E. the Greater Atlas & Tripoli, N. & E. the Mediterranean Sea. Area roughly estimated at 72,000 sq. miles, & pop. at between two & two & a-half millions. Its E. coast forms the W. limit of the great inlet of the Mediterranean in N. Africa, & is indented by the Gulf of Cabes (anc. Syrtis-Minor) and Gulf of Hammamet: on the N. coast are the gulfs of Tunis & Bizerta. The dom. comprises the islands Jerba, Karkenna, Galita, &c. Principal river the Mejerdah (anc. Bagradah.) In the S. is a sandy waste, in which is the large salt marsh Sibhah; but most part of the surface is of high fertility, & in ancient times it was one of the granaries of Rome. Principal vegetable products — wheat, maize, barley, sorgho, millet, olives, dates, grapes, & other fruits, henna, & tobacco. Cotton & indigo have been recently introduced as articles of culture, & some saffron & opium are raised. Copper, lead, silver, & salt, from Sibhah, are amongst the mineral products, & near Porto-Farina is a quicksilver mine; but mining, like agriculture, is very backward. Domestic animals comprise camels, horses, buffaloes, a small but good breed of oxen, & merino sheep. Principal manufactures are of red caps, exported to all parts of the Mediterranean, soap at Susa, woollen, silk, and linen fabrics, and morocco leather. Caravans come annually from Central Africa, bringing slaves, senna, ostrich feathers, gold dust, gum, & ivory, which are exchanged for manufactured goods, spices, and gunpowder. Others from Constantinople bring wax, dried skins, cattle, & sheep, in return for muslins & other woven fabrics, Tunis mantles, colonial produce, essences, &c. Principal imports by sea are cochineal, raw silk, coffee, sugar, Spanish woollen cloths, wines and coin. State religion Mohammedanism. Goverment exercised by an hereditary bey, nominally tributary to the Turkish Sultan, by whom he is confirmed in his rule, & assisted by a divan of 37 members. His rev. is estimated at 1,000,000*l.* annually, but double this sum is annually raised by taxation, customs, &c., the residue being retained by the collectors. Armed force 50,000 men. Naval force consists of a corvette, some smaller vessels, & about 32 gun boats. Besides Tunis, the cap., the chief towns are Susa, Hammamet, Bizerta, Sfax, Cabes, Monastir, Gafsa, Kairwan, Zeughwan, & Beja.—Tunis (anc. Tunes), the cap. is situated on the West side of the Gulf of Tunis, and separated from the Gulf by the Lake of Tunis. Lat. 36° 48′ N., lon. 10° 16′ 2″ E. Pop. estimated from 100,000 to 150,000, of whom 30,000 are Jews. It stands on rising ground, encircled by a double line of walls, the outer of which, enclosing several suburbs, is 5 m. in circuit. On a height W.ward is the citadel, & on other adjacent heights are various outworks. Houses of stone, but mean; streets narrow & filthy. The bazaars are superior to those of Algiers, & there are numerous handsome mosques, a magnificent palace of the bey, once the residence of Queen Caroline, R. Cath. & Greek churches, various synagogues, an Italian theatre, and several large barracks, one on the site of an ancient edifice. About 14 m. W. the city is the Bardo, a fortified summer residence of the bey, & 3 miles N.E. are traces of ancient Carthage. Imports, raw silk, Spanish wool, sugar, coffee, dyes, timber, corn, woollen & silk fabrics, & most manufactured goods. Exports, red caps, & other woollen goods, wool, hides, fish, corn, fruit, live stock, olive oil, wax, & soap. [TURKEY.—The Gulf of Tunis, an inlet of the Mediterr., extends inland for 30 m., between capes Bon & Farina. Breadth at entrance 45 m. It everywhere affords good anchorage in from 4 to 10 fathoms water, receives the river Medjerdah, & has on its S.W. side the Goletta, or entrance to the lagoon of Tunis, & the ruins of Carthage.—The Lagoon of Tunis is a shallow lake communicating on its E. side with the Gulf of Tunis by the Goletta, a short & narrow strait. Length 12 m., breadth 5 m. In it is a fortified island opposite the city of Tunis, on its W. shore, & on its N.E. side are the ruins of Carthage, of which city it was the port.

TURKESTAN, or TARTARY, a region occupying the centre of Asia, between lat. 30° & 50° N., & lon. 50° & 82° E., & consisting of the two following chief divisions.

TURKESTAN (CHINESE), called also THIAN-SHAN & LITTLE BUCHARIA, an extensive region forming the W. portion of the Chinese empire, & including Dzoungaria, comprised between lat 30° & 50° N., & lon 22° 30′ & 100° E., surrounded by Mongolia, the Ko-ko-nor country, Tibet, W. Siberia, & the tableland of Pamir, which separates it from Independent Turkestan. Area & pop. uncertain, as it is little known to Europeans. It is an elevated table land, traversed by several lofty mountain chains, & watered by rivers which terminate in extensive salt lakes. Much of its surface forms part of the desert of Gobi; elsewhere are many fertile districts producing corn of all kinds, rice, cotton, & fruits, which with cattle & various mineral & manufactured products, form the principal exports. A large commercial intercourse is kept up with the countries to the W. & S.W., & with Asiatic Russia. Imports from Cashmere comprise shawls, kincobs, white piece goods, & leather, in return for refined silver and shawl-wool. From Fyzabad in Budukshan, slaves and gems are the principal imports; from Khokan, piece goods; and from Russia, broad-cloth, brocades, & bullion; the returns to these countries consisting of tea, silver, & Chinese porcelain. The pop. are mostly either Mohammedans or Buddhists, with some Christians & Jews. In the N. the government is wholly military; elsewhere Chinese & Mantchoo troops garrison the cities, which have their own civil government, & the principal of which are Yarkund, Kashgar, Khoten, Ili, & Khamil. It was conquered in 1758 by the Chinese, but their rule here has been repeatedly disturbed, and a formidable insurrection took place in 1826-7.

TURKESTAN (INDEPENDENT), a region of Central Asia, between lat. 31° & 50° N., & lon. 51° & 75° E., having E. the Pamir table-land, separating it from Chinese Turkestan, N. Western Siberia & the Russian gov. Orenburg, W. the Caspian Sea, & S. Persia and Afghanistan. Estimated area 720,800 sq. m., & pop. supposed to be about four millions. In the E. it is mountainous, elsewhere generally level, with a slope towards the W., & in that direction the Oxus & Jaxartes rivers flow through it to the Aral Sea, which is wholly comprised within its limits. It consists of the doms. of Bokhara, Khiva, Khokan, Koondooz, the Kirghiz territory, & Kafiristan (which see for further information).

TURKESTAN, a town of Central Asia, khanat and 220 m. N.N.W. Khokan.

TURKEY IN ASIA extends between lat. 30° & 42° N., & lon. 26° to 48° E., bounded E. by Persia, S. by the Persian Gulf & Arabia, W. by the Mediterranean, N. by the Sea of Marmora & the Black Sea, & N.E. by Russia; & comprises, in the Archipelago, the isls. Mitylene, Scio, Samos, Nicaria, Patmos, Cos, Rhodes, & Scarpanto, with Cyprus in the Mediterranean. The principal lakes are Van & the Dead Sea; & the chief rivers the Euphrates, Tigris, & their affls., which flow S. to the Persian Gulf; the Kizil-Irmak, Yeshil-Irmak, which flow N. to the Black Sea; the Sarabat, & Meander to the Archipelago; the Sihun, Jihoon, Aasy to the Mediterranean; and the Jordan to the Dead Sea. The chief mountains are the ranges of Taurus, Anti-Taurus, & Lebanon. The soil & climate present many varieties; in the S. are vast arid plains, but on the river banks and in the valleys of Lebanon, the soil is extremely fertile. The summits of Taurus are clad with snow, & their flanks are covered with the vegetation of cold & temperate countries, while the valleys have a temperature almost tropical, and produce the fruits of S. Asia. The climate of Anatolia is temperate, and the soil is capable of producing all kinds of grain and fruit. The mountains contain all the useful metals. The chief products are oil, dye stuffs, medicinal plants, gums, wax, dried fruits, gall nuts, cotton, silk, wool, goats hair, leeches, & sponges. The imports into Turkey annually amount to 257,000,000 francs; exports 193,000,000. The Turkish army in 1853 in active service amounted to 376,101 men; army of reserve 126,889 men. Total 502,990 men. The navy consisted of the following number of ships, with armament, & number of men:

The general features of the country are described under Asia Minor, and particulars under the heads Adana, Anatolia, Armenia, Bagdad, Caramania, Damascus, Erzeroum, Kurdistan, Mesopotamia, Palestine, Syria, Trebizonde. The Turks originally from Turkestan, founded at different times, several empires in Asia. At the end of the 13th century, Osman, or Othman, one of their emirs or princes, established the present empire in Asia Minor. The Turks invaded Europe at the end of the 14th century, & conquered successively their present provs.; they took Constantinople in 1453. In the 16th century their dominion extended in Europe over the whole of Greece, and part of Hungary, the Crimea, & the shores of the Black Sea; & the whole of the countries now forming Turkey in Asia, the Hedjaz, Egypt, & the regencies of Tripoli, Tunis, & Algiers, were subjugated by them. But since the 17th century, their power has greatly declined. Austria has expelled them from Hungary; Russia has deprived them of the provs. between the mouths of the Danube & the Caucasus in Europe, & those forming W. Transcaucasia in Asia; the Greeks have formed an independent state; Algiers has been wrested by the French; Moldavia, Wallachia, and Servia, are under the influence of Russia, and only nominally subject to the Porte, whose power has nearly vanished from many of the provs. of Asia Minor, Arabia, & Egypt. The Turks call themselves Osmanlis, from Osman.

The ensuing statistics will serve to show how diverse in origin and in religion the subjects of the Sublime Porte are, as well as what is their actual number.

The emperor, who is styled sultan or grand seignor, is regarded as absolute sovereign of the state, & Supreme Pontiff. The provs. are placed under pashas, whose authority is exercised with great caprice, & is frequently most oppressive. Several towns and small communities form a species of republics in the middle of this despotic state.

The following are the names of emperors & the date of the commencement of the reign of each:—Osman, 1298; Orchan, 1325; Moorad, or Amurath I., 1358; Bayezeed I., 1389; Interregnum, 1402; Mohammed I., 1413; Amurath II., 1421; Mohammed II., 1451; Bayezeed II., 1481; Selim I., 1512; Sulieman I., 1520; Selim II., 1566; Amurath III., 1574; Mohammed III., 1595; Ahmed I., 1604; Mustafa, 1617; Amurath IV., 1623; Ibrahim, 1640; Mohammed IV., 1655; Sulieman II., 1687; Ahmed II., 1690; Mustafa II., 1695; Ahmed III., 1703; Mahmood I., 1730; Mustafa III., 1757; Abdul Ahmed, 1774; Selim III., 1789; Mustafa IV., & Mahmood II., 1808; Abdul Medjid-Khan, born 20th April, 1823, succeeded his father, Mahmood II., 1st July, 1839.

TURKEY IN EUROPE extends between lat. 39° & 48° 20′ N., & lon. 15° 40′ & 29° 30′ E.; bounded E. by the Black Sea; S. by Greece, the Archipelago, and the Sea of Marmora; W. by Austria, the Adriatic, and the Ionian Sea; & N. by Austria & Russia. Most of the surface is an undulating region of hills and valleys, mountains & table-lands, of little elevation; but it is traversed in the centre from E. to W. by an extensive mountain chain. [Balkan.] The other principal mountains are the Despoto Dagh or Rhodope in the S., Pindus in the S.W., the Dinaric Alps in the W., & the Carpathians in the N. Turkey is watered by numerous rivers, the chief of which are the Danube, and its affls. the Drina, Morava, Aluta, Sereth, & Pruth in the basin of the Black Sea; the Maritza, Strymon, Vardar, in the basin of the Archipelago in the S.; and the Voyussa, Drin, & Narenta, in the basin of the Adriatic, in the W. Largest lakes are those of Ochrida and Scutari in the W. The climate is more severe than might be supposed from the geographical position of the country: in the recesses of the highest mountains snow lies during the greater part of the year. It is excessively cold in winter, during the N.E. winds, which are then prevalent, & in the plains of Walachia & Moldavia the sledge is used as in Russia. A great portion of Albania, protected by elevated mountains from the N.E. winds, enjoys a delicious climate; but this district is liable to be visited by destructive earthquakes. In the rocky dists. of the interior, & in the maritime valleys of Albania, the summer is insupportably hot. Destructive storms are frequent in the S. A great portion of Turkey is covered with forests; the best oak grows in Servia & Lower Bosnia; the largest forests of fir & pine occur in Bosnia & Upper Croatia. The olive thrives in the maritime plains of Albania, where also the orange and citron are cultivated. The vine grows in S. Turkey, Herzegovina, & Servia, at an elevation of from 1,400 to 2,000 feet. Maize is cultivated in the S.; rice, cotton, rye, & barley in Central Turkey, at an elevation of 2,000 to 3,000 feet. Agricultural operations are conducted in the rudest manner, & only a small portion of the country is cultivated. The principal wild animals are the brown bear in the wooded mountains between Albania & Macedonia, Bosnia, & the Lower Rhodope, but seldom in the Balkan: the wolf is common; the wild boar, chamois, stag, in the forests; the hare is abundant in Walachia; these are mostly hunted for their skins. Domestic animals comprise the dog, cat, hog; the sheep forms the principal riches of the Walachian provs., whence an immense quantity of wool is exported. Goats are more abundant in Turkey than in any other country of Europe. Cattle are extensively reared in Walachia, Servia, & Bosnia, and the buffalo is common in Walachia, Bulgaria, & Thrace. The horse of Turkey is small but active; the ass and mule are chiefly employed in Thrace. Trout, &c., are plentiful in the rivers; and leeches which abound in the marshes, form an important article of export. Turkey has mines of iron, lead, salt, & marble, but none of them are worked to advantage. Manufs. are almost entirely domestic; the chief comprise saddles, copper & tin utensils, fire-arms, swords, coarse woollen cloths, linen & cotton spinning. Silks are manufac. chiefly at Salonika, Seres, & Larissa. Shawls are made only in the Asiatic provs., especially at Damascus. Carpets wrought by hand in the style of the Gobelins tapestry are extensively manufactured in Bulgaria, & in Servia. There are cotton printing works in different localities; & dyeing, especially of bright red colors, in Bulgaria & the S. provs. Tanneries are numerous; embroidery is carried on by the females in the S. provs. Distilleries of brandy from prunes are common throughout all the country. Printing exists only at Bucharest, Belgrade, Constantinople, Cetigne, & Montenegro; filigree work is made in the large towns, & there are powder-mills near Constantinople. Commerce is almost entirely in the hands of Greeks, Armenians, & Jews. [Adrianople, Bosnia, Bulgaria, Constantinople.]

TUSCANY (GRAND DUCHY OF), (Italian Toscana, ancient Etruria,) a state of Central Italy, mostly between lat. 42° 22′ & 44° 30′ N., & lon. 9° 45′ & 12° 22′ E., bounded N.E. & S. by the Pontif. Sta., and W. by Sardinia & the Tyrrhenian Sea (Mediterranean), & having beyond Tuscany-proper, three separate dists.—I. Barga, in the valley of the Upper Serchio, nearly surrounded by Lucca, & constituting the grand duchy of Garfagnana.—II. Versalia, a dist. of Tiertrasanta, between the Mediterranean & Lucca.—III. the grand duchy of Lunigiana, composed of fragmentary portions of territory in the doms. of Savoy, Parma, & Modena; the Island of Elba & the small Island Giglio in the Mediterranean. Cap. Florence.

Civil Divisions, Population, etc.—Tuscany is divided into six departments, two civil & military governments, and 246 communes.

Departments, etc.	Area in sq. m.	Pop. in 1852.
Firenze (Florence)	2,259	700,015
Lucca	514	260,745
Pisa	1,182	227,719
Siena	1,464	186,263
Arezzo	1,273	218,283
Grossetto	1,719	77,891
Livorno (Leghorn), Gov.	38	85,834
Isle of Elba, Gov.	97	21,271
Total	8,546	1,778,021

This population was distributed into 320,474 families.

The chain of the Apennines covers the N. and N.E. portion of the grand duchy: the highest point, Monte Falterona, in which the Arno has its origin, is 5,557 ft. above the sea; the rest of the territory is agreeably diversified by hills & valleys. The principal rivers are the Arno, Ombrone, & Serchio, the former receiving nearly all the streams from the S. slope of the Apennines, & both flowing to the Mediterranean. The Tiber rises in the E. of Tuscany. The canal of Chiana unites the river Chiana with the Arno. Tuscany has no lakes of any extent, but numerous pools and extensive marshes. The climate is mild & salubrious; except in the Maremma, a marshy dist., extending along the S. coast, & covering nearly one-sixth part of the superfices of the state, the malaria from which produces dangerous fevers. Tuscany is celebrated for its mineral riches, and for the number of its mineral and thermal springs. Iron is most abundant in the island of Elba; copper, argentiferous lead, sulphur, mercury, alum, coal, statuary, marble, & alabaster, in different parts of the grand duchy; and borax is supplied in great abundance from the singular borax lagoons of Volterra. From its fertility the Val d'Arno is called the garden of Italy, but agriculture is so imperfectly conducted that the corn raised is insufficient for home consumption. The chief crops are maize, wheat, rye, & barley. The culture of oil is prosecuted with great care, and that called Florence oil is celebrated. Wine is generally of inferior quality; that of Montepulciano is the best. Mules & sheep are of superior breeds, & herds of cattle are pastured in the drained portions of the Maremma. The principal manufs. are silks, in which Tuscany maintains its celebrity; woollens, which at one time employed 30,000 persons in Florence alone, but which are now confined to coarse cloths; paper of excellent quality is extensively manufactured. The making of straw-hats has greatly declined, although still important, especially in the vicinity of the capital, where great numbers of the peasantry are employed in preparing the straw. The other branches of industry comprise the manuf. of glass & crystal, articles in marble, alabaster, iron, brass, porcelain, coral, wax, carpet making, & typography. The export of manufactured goods forms a chief branch of the trade of Leghorn, whence 40 or 50 barges, with 10 or 12 men each, are annually sent to the coral fishery. The mercantile marine comprised, in 1853, 911 ships of all sizes, with a total of 37,506 tons, of which 9,339 belonged to Elba. Chief exports, olive oil, hides, straw-hats, borax, rags, wool, hemp, potash, coral, marble, tallow, cork, building-timber, & paper. Imports British manufactures, grain, colonial goods, French, Swiss, & German manufs., and salt fish. Revenue 1853 amounted to $5,713,984. Expenses same year $5,703,385. Public debt $8,000,000. Government was formerly an absolute monarchy, but a representative constitution was obtained in 1848. Tuscany has long been considered the most enlightened & flourishing state in Italy. Public instruction is widely diffused, & its dialect is considered the purest Italian. Pisa, Sienna, & Florence are the seats of universities. The army comprised in 1853, 14,759 men; navy, 3 schooners & 2 gun-boats. [ELBA—ETRURIA.]

TYROL (Germ. Tirol, and VORARLBERG (anc. Rhætia, & a part of Noricum), a prov. of the Austrian empire, with the title of county, between lat. 45° 39′ 30″ & 47° 45′ 15″ N., & lon. 9° 35′ & 13° E., having E. & S. Carinthia & the prov. Venice, N. Austrian Italy, W. Bavaria, the principality of Liechtenstein, & Switzerland, of which last it forms an E. prolongation. Area, 10,231 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 859,758, mostly of German, but in the S. of Italian descent. It is traversed from W. to E. by the Rhætian Alps, which separate the valley of the Inn in the N. from those of the Drave & Adige in the S.; Mount Ortler, on the W., rises to 12,854 feet, & the Gross Glockner, on the E., to 12,425 feet in height. Besides the Inn, Drave, and Adige, with their affls., the N.W. part, Vorarlberg, is watered by the Ill & Bregenz, flowing into the Lake of Constance, which forms the N.W. boundary. Small lakes are numerous, & the N. part of the Lake of Garda is in the Tyrol. Climate severe in the upland t., mean temp. of year at Innsbruck 48°.5, and at Botzen 55°.4, Fahr.; the narrow valleys of the S., however, have a warm climate, similar to that of the adjacent part of Lombardy. Some maize, wheat, & pulse, are grown in the lower valleys, & buckwheat, rye, & oats on the mntn. sides; but the corn raised is not sufficient for home consumption, & the chief wealth of the rural pop., as in Switzerland, is in their cattle & other livestock. Wine and silk are the products of the S. provinces. The rearing of canary birds is pursued on a large scale in the valley of the Inn, and most parts of Europe are supplied with singing birds from the Tyrol. Wolves, bears, wild boars, marmots, chamois, &c., inhabit the mountain districts. Mining industry is somewhat important—coal, iron, and salt, are the principal minerals obtained; copper, gold, silver, lead, & cobalt, are met with, but few metallic mines, except iron, are wrought; there are numerous mineral springs. Silks are manufactured in the S., iron goods, cottons, linens, leather & wooden articles are executed with much ingenuity at Innsbrück, &c., in the Inn valley, glass & paper are the other principal manufactured products. Principal exports are cattle, cheese, silk, iron & iron wares, salt, wine, timber, tobacco, and silk goods; corn, and various manufactured goods. The transit trade between Germany and Italy is amongst the most important, occupying many of the pop.; the principal passes for traffic are the Brenner & Stelvio, across the main chain of the Alps, & the routes by Trient & the Pusterthal in the S. Many of the inhabs. emigrate annually as laborers into the neighboring countries. Nearly all are Roman Catholics, under 10 bishops, suffragans of the archbishop of Salzburg. The Tyrol has its own national diet, composed of the nobility, clergy, deputies of the towns & of the rural dists., who meet in one chamber. It is divided into the 4 circs. of Brixen, Bregauza, Innsbrück, & Trent; cap. Innsbrück. The Tyrol passed into the possession of the House of Hapsburg in the 13th century, & its inhabitants are amongst the most attached to the imperial rule in the Austrian empire.

The increasing preponderance of males in the white population is caused by the greater immigration of men than women. Among the free colored inhabitants the converse obtains, owing in some measure to a disproportionate emigration of males to Liberia. The slaves which are affected neither by immigration nor emigration, are found to be in a sexual equipoise; but with a tendency to a feminine preponderance,—an aspect observable in all old settled communities.

In 1850, the aggregate number of "free white male persons," over fifteen years of age, employed in professional & industrial pursuits was 5,371,876; & of these the number employed in commerce, trade, manufactures, mechanic arts, & mining, was 1,596,265; in agriculture, 2,400,583; in labor not agricultural, 222,520; in the army, 5,370; in sea & river navigation, 116,341; in law, medicine, & divinity, 24,515; in other pursuits requiring education, 95,814; in government civil service, 24,960; in domestic service, 22,243; and in other occupations, 22,159.

Nativities of Slaves.—It is almost impossible to distinguish between native & foreign-born slaves, & no facts on this subject, except under the mortality schedules, were collected by the census takers. From these it appears that slaves, save to some extent Africans, were generally considered as natives of the place of decease. As few slaves have been introduced into the country since 1808, and those chiefly in Florida previous to 1819, under Spanish rule, and into Louisiana, it will be necessary to look into the class over 60 years of age for the survivors of the original Africans. The whole number of slaves in 1850 over 60 was 114,752; and of these no one familiar with the south would admit that more than 8,000 or 10,000 were Africans. In Louisiana in 1849-50 a hundred & ten African slaves are reported to have died out of a total of 6,083 deaths of slaves of all ages. In Virginia a few or no African deaths are reported. The ages of deceased Africans on the census schedules, generally range higher than 60, often more than 70, & in South Carolina as high as 80, 90, 100 & 110.

Proportion of Black and Mulattoes.—Of the free colored population 275,400 were blacks, & 159,295 mulattoes, or in the proportion of 100 blacks to 57.56 mulattoes; of the slave population, 2,957,657 were blacks, & 246,656 mulattoes, or as 100 to 8.34; & of the total free & slave population 3,233,057 were blacks, & 405,751 mulattoes, or as 100 to 12.54.

Slave Owners.—The total number of families holding slaves in 1850, was 347,525; & have on the average of 5.7 persons to each family. There are about 2,000,000 persons in the relation of slave-owners, or about a third of the white population in the slave states, & in South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, & Louisiana one half are in such a position. Of the aggregate number of families holding slaves, 68,820 owned each one; 105,683 over one & under five; 80,765 five & under ten; 54,595 ten & under twenty; 29,733 twenty & under fifty; 6,196 fifty & under a hundred; 1,479 a hundred & under two hundred; 187 two & under three hundred; 56 three & under five hundred; 18 five hundred & under a thousand; & two a thousand & upwards. As the census statistics were taken by counties, the results do not show the actual numbers owned by individuals where estates lie in two or more counties; & it is well known that many planters in reality own a larger number than the census returns show. This will be found to be the case in the cotton & sugar states, where the plantations are on a vast scale. The above returns however, show that one fifth of the properties are in a single slave, & nearly one half in less than five slaves. The following exhibits the number of families holding slaves in each of the slave states:

Alabama	29,295	Delaware	809	Maryland	16,040	South Carolina	25,596
Arkansas	5,999	Georgia	38,456	Mississippi	23,116	Tennessee	33,864
Columbia, District of	1,477	Kentucky	38,385	Missouri	19,185	Texas	7,747
Florida	3,520	Louisiana	20,670	North Carolina	28,303	Virginia	55,063

Slave Occupations.—In no census have the occupations of slaves been returned. How many are employed as mechanics, how many as laborers, how many as house servants, cannot be known; nor more than approximately how many on the different agricultural crops of the south. It may, however, be safe to say, that 2,500,000 are rural, & the remainder of the whole number urban, and that of the rural slaves, at least as many will be employed as there are slave properties, which would leave about 2,450,000 slaves to be directly employed in agriculture, including males & females, & persons of all ages. Slaves under 10 and over 60 years of age, however, are seldom employed industrially. The distribution of the agricultural slaves among the great staples is in something like the following proportions, as near as can be judged after a careful examination of the subject, bearing in mind, at the same time, that large quantities of bread stuffs are produced in addition:—In the production of hemp & flax, about 60,000, or 3 per cent.; or rice, 125,000, or 5 per cent.; of sugar, 150,000, or 6 per cent.; of tobacco, 350,000, or 14 per cent.; & of cotton, 1,765,000, or 72 per cent.

Physical Features.—The United States is traversed by two ranges of mountains, the Alleghanies, and the great mountain mass of North America, the Rocky Mountains. These divide the country into three distinct geographical regions; the Atlantic slope, descending from the crest of the Alleghanies to the ocean on the S.E.; the Great Mississippi valley, between the Alleghanies & the Rocky Mountains; & the Western declivity, from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific. The Alleghanies are a long plateau, crested with several mountain ridges, & groups separated from each other by wide and elevated valleys. They commence in Northern Alabama & Georgia, & reach their culminating point in North Carolina, where they attain an elevation of 6,476 feet; thence passing N.easterly in parallel ridges, varying in height from 2,000 ft. to 6,000 ft., & a breadth of from 20 to 100 miles, through Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, N. Hampshire, & Eastern Canada, where they terminate in the bold headland of Cape Gaspé. In New York they reach their highest elevations in the spur branching off N.westerly, known as the Catskill mountains & the Adirondack group. In Massachusetts at Mount Washington. In Vermont it attains its highest elevation in the Green mountains, known as the Mansfield mountain & the Camels Hump. In New Hampshire in the White Mountains, & in Canada at Mount Logan.

The Rocky Mountains take a much greater breadth, & the culminating points reach the region of eternal snows, rising in the portion passing through the United States to the height of 14,000 ft. This is the great mountain range of the continent, traversing it from Cape Horn to the Arctic ocean, forming the longest continuous mountain mass on the face of the globe. Between this range and the Pacific coast are some minor mntn. ridges, whose culminations in several places rise far above the snow line & furnish some active volcanoes.

The Mississippi river has its entire course in the territory of the Republic, & the valley drained by it, and its numerous tributaries, is one of the most extensive fertile tracts on the earth's surface. The most noted feature of the United States is the slightly inclined plain, which extends along the entire Atlantic coast, with a breadth of from 50 to 100 miles in width; beyond this plain commences the hilly country extending to the foot of the Alleghany ridge. The soil of the Atlantic plain is sandy, but in many places highly productive; & the hilly portion has a strong fertile soil, capable of supporting a dense population. The Pacific section is traversed by several extensive rivers, & presents a much diversified surface, with varied & picturesque scenery; but some portions are mere desert wastes, such is said to be the case with the great California basin, the water courses of which are lost in the sands & volcanic regions, or enter lakes with no visible outlet.

Lakes.—All the great lakes, with the exception of Michigan & Champlain, lie partly in Canada, the division line passing centrally through them, and their connecting streams, for a distance of about 1,500 miles. The first (the most extensive sheet of fresh water on the earth's surface) in the series, is Lake Superior, the surplus waters of which, descending through the strait of St. Marys into Lake Huron, which, with the accumulated waters from Michigan, pass through the St. Clair Strait & Lake, & the Detroit into Lake Erie; whence passing over the precipice of Niagara, & through Niagara straits, enter Ontario; Lake Ontario has its outlet by the magnificent St. Lawrence, through Canadian territory, into the Atlantic Ocean. The following is a tabular statement of the extent of these fresh-water seas, with their depth & elevation:

Lakes.	Mean Length.	Mean Breadth.	Area.	Mean Depth.	Elev. above Sea.

Lake Champlain, lying between New York & Vermont, is 128 miles long, & from 1 to 16 wide, and discharges its waters through the Sorel into the St. Lawrence. It is computed that these lakes contain 14,000 cubic miles of water—a quantity more than five-sevenths of all the fresh water of the earth. The extent of the country drained by them from the north-west angle of Superior to the St. Lawrence, including also the area of the lakes themselves, is estimated at 335,515 square miles.

Rivers.—The water courses of the United States are on an extensive scale, & afford, with the great artificial connecting links, a system of inland navigation unsurpassed. First in order are those of the Atlantic slope, the waters of which enter directly into the ocean; the principal of these are the Penobscot, the Kennebec, the Merrimac, the Connecticut, the Hudson, the Delaware, the Susquehanna, the Potomac, the James, the Cape Fear, the Great Pedee, the Savannah, the Altamaha, & St. Johns, &c. These are all navigable streams, some for a great distance inland. Second, the rivers entering the Gulf of Mexico or Sea of Cortes. The Appalachicola, the Mobile, the immense Mississippi, the Sabine, the Trinity, the Brazos, the Colorado, & the Rio Grande. The rivers entering the Pacific are the Columbia, the Sacramento & San Joaquin, the Colorado, & Gila, the latter two discharging their waters into the Gulf of California. There are many rivers entering the great lakes, and also the St. Lawrence, the great artery of Canada. (See rivers under proper names.)

A remarkable analogy exists in the structure of the land in the United States & Central & Northern Europe. Gneiss, mica, schist, & granite, prevail over wide areas in the Alleghanies; & on the Atlantic slope, & in the high & middle latitudes of the continent, silurian strata extend over 2,000 miles. The Rocky Mountains also are mostly silurian, except the east ridge, which is of stratified crystalline rocks, amygdaloid, & ancient volcanic productions. The Coast Range has the same characteristics, with immense tracts of volcanic rocks, both ancient & modern, chiefly obsidian. In North America volcanic action is entirely confined to the coast & highlands along the Pacific; but within the United States at the present day this action is dormant (with the exception of Mt. St. Helens), although its activity is very apparent both to the north & south—to the N. in Mt. St. Elias, & to the S. in the Mexican volcanoes. The principal minerals produced in the United States are iron, coal, copper, lead, & gold, with a great number of less importance. Since 1848 the great field of gold gathering has been California, where large quantities have been obtained with little labor [California], & both silver & quicksilver abound in the same state. Silver, however, is mostly obtained from the lead & copper mines of the Upper Mississippi & Lake Superior countries, where it is found in combination with these metals. The principal deposits of gold, otherwise than those of California, occur in the primary rocks between the river Rappahannock in Virginia & the Coosa in Alabama; but it has been found in smaller quantities as far north as Maine. Gold & silver abound also in New Mexico & Western Texas, & probably in the Mesilla territory. The coal fields of the states are of prodigious extent. Nearly one-fourth of the country between the Alleghanies & the Mississippi is composed of coal beds; & in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, & Illinois, coal mining has become of vast importance to general industry. The ascertained areas of the coal formation in the under-mentioned states are as follows:—in Alabama, 3,400 sq. m.; Georgia, 150; Tennessee, 4,300; Kentucky, 13,500; Virginia, 21,195; Maryland, 550; Ohio, 11,900; Indiana, 7,700; Illinois, 44,000; Pennsylvania, 15,437; Michigan, 5,000; & Missouri 6,000;—total, 133,132 sq. m. Coal has also been found on the Pacific slope,—in California, Oregon, & Washington,—& the mineral will no doubt be found in Texas & the adjoining country. As a general remark, it may be stated that the coal east of the highest Alleghanies takes the form of anthracite, while west & in the valleys of the great central rivers it is bituminous. Iron is equally abundant with coal, & is usually found in juxtaposition with it. The principal seats of iron mining are Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Missouri, Kentucky, & Northern Michigan; & it is also extensively mined in Northern New York. Pennsylvania, however, is pre-eminent in this industry, & produces at least one-half the iron mined in the United States. Copper is mined chiefly in Northern Michigan, but to a less extent in Connecticut, New York, Tennessee, North Carolina, etc.; & rich copper mines exist also in New Mexico, near the head of the Gila river. Lead is worked chiefly in Illinois, Wisconsin, & Iowa; on the Mississippi, & for many miles around the territory, in which are included Dubuque, Galena, & Mineral Point; & in these regions upwards of 20,000 tons are annually produced. [With respect to other mineral products refer to the STATES severally.] The United States has also valuable quarries of marble & other building stone; salt mines & springs, & an infinite variety of mineral waters, many of which are highly medicinal. The number of persons engaged in mining & quarrying in 1850, was as follows:—colliers, 28,168; miners, 77,419; quarrymen, 1,932; salt makers, 2,796;—total, 110,316.

The predominating character of the climate of the United States is a comparative coldness, although in some parts an oppressive heat prevails during a portion of the summer. On the Atlantic coast the thermometer measures 10° lower heat than in the same latitudes in Europe; & the mean annual temperature of New York is scarcely that of London. Bordering the northern boundary of the United States the cold is intense, while frosts occasionally occur as low down as Florida. In winter, keen & piercing N.W. winds prevail, & even carry their chilling influence into the more southern regions. The transitions from cold to heat, & from winter to summer, are very sudden, especially in the north. These, however, are not productive of injury to the animal economy, & hence, in the northern states, where they are more palpable, the health of the inhabitants is robust & permanent. In the south, on approaching the tropics, the heat is occasionally excessive; & from the large bodies of water along the east & south shores the air is moist, & the incentives to disease more vigorous. On the whole, however, the climate is propitious to agriculture & out-door employments. The forests of the United States are of vast extent, & the individual trees of the most enormous dimensions. These are extremely valuable for their products, & furnish timber for ship-building & the hardest woods for cabinet ware; & consist principally of pines, oak, ash, sycamore, chestnut, walnut, hickory, maple, cedar, cherry, locust, etc. Fruit trees of every description are also abundant;—in the N. the apple, pear, plum, peach, etc., & in the S. the orange, lemon, & other tropical varieties. Maize, or Indian corn, the only important farinaceous plant peculiar to America, has a very extensive range in the United States, & is successfully cultivated throughout the Republic.

The following table will show the proportion of population & certain agricultural products of the several states to the total of the United States:—

Wheat, barley, oats, peas, & potatoes, are also in universal cultivation; & rice, sugar, cotton, etc., are grown in the southern states. The vine also succeeds well, & of late years a considerable quantity of wine has been made in several of the states. Of 293,560,614 ac. of land in occupation in 1850, the quantity in use for plantations & farms was 113,032,614 ac., & the valuation of the whole is stated at $3,271,575,426. The value of farming implements & machinery was $151,587,688. The live stock was valued at $544,189,516, & consisted of—horses, 4,336,719; asses & mules, 559,331; milch cows, 6,385,094; working oxen, 1,709,744; other cattle, 9,693,069; sheep, 21,723,220; & swine, 30,354,213. In the year preceding 1st June, 1850, the amount of live stock slaughtered was valued at $111,703,142, being at the rate of one-fifth of the whole annually. The dairy products were —butter, 313,345,306 pounds; & cheese, 105,585,893 pounds; & the wool crop was 52,514,959 pounds. The grain crops for the same year amounted to—wheat, 100,485,944 bush.; rye, 14,188,813; Ind. corn, 592,071,104; oats, 146,584,179; barley, 5,167,015; & buckwheat, 8,956,912; & other food crops to—rice, 215,313,497 pounds; peas & beans, 9,219,901 bush.; Irish potatoes, 65,797,896; & sweet potatoes, 38,268,148 bush. Tobacco was produced to the amount of 199,752,655 lbs., chiefly in Kentucky, Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, Missouri, & Ohio; cotton, 2,469,093 bales of 400 lbs., chiefly in South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, & Tennessee; hemp—dew-rotted, 33,192, & water-rotted 1,678 tons, chiefly in Kentucky & Missouri; flax, 7,709,876 lbs., chiefly in New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina, Missouri, Kentucky, & Ohio; flaxseed, 562,312 bush.; silk cocoons, 10,843 lbs.; maple sugar, 34,253,436 lbs., chiefly in New York, Vermont, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, & Western Virginia; cane sugar, 247,577 hhds. of 1,000 lbs., in the Gulf states, but especially in Louisiana; molasses, including maple, 12,700,896 gals.; beeswax, 14,853,790 lbs.; hay, 13,838,642 tons; clover seed, 468,978 bush.; other grass seed, 416,831 bush.; hops, 3,497,029 lbs., of which at least three-fifths are produced in New York; wine, 221,249 gallons; etc., etc. The value of orchard products is stated at $7,723,186, & of market garden products at $5,280,030. The value of home-made manufactures returned in the census of 1850 was $27,493,644. It may here be remarked that many of the crops above accounted for are beneath the average crops of the several previous years, varying from 20 to 30 per centum. This is specially noticeable in wheat & potatoes.

The following compares the live stock in 1840 & 1850:—

Census.	Horses & Mules.	Neat Cattle.	Sheep.	Swine.
1840	4,335,669	14,971,584	19,311,374	26,301,293
1850	4,896,050	17,778,907	21,723,220	30,354,213

And the following compares the grain crops returned at the two periods:—

Crops.	1840.	1850.	Crops.	1840.	1850.

The whole number of persons occupied in agriculture, in 1850, was 2,400,583.

The United States are making rapid progress in manufactures, & the inventive genius of the country in projecting & perfecting machinery for the abridgment of labor must eventually insure to it a high position in this branch of industry. The statistics of the manufactures of the several states are enumerated under their proper captions, & hence in this place it will only be necessary to give the aggregates as they have been returned in the official census. The entire capital invested in the various manufactures of the United States on the 1st June, 1850,—not including any establishments producing less than the annual value of $500,—amounted in round numbers to $536,000,000; the value of raw material used & consumed to $550,000,000; the number of persons employed to 1,050,000, whose earnings were $240,000,000; & the value of articles manufactured to $1,020,000,000. The following are the statistics of the great manufactures—cotton, wool, iron, leather, etc.:—

REMARKS.

Cotton used, 641,240 bales. Sheeting made, 763,678,407 yards; and yarn, 27,259,340 lbs.

Wool used, 74,862,829 lbs. Cloth made, 82,206,652 yards; and yarn, 4,294,326 lbs.

Ore used, 1,579,309 tons; coal do., 645,252 do.; coke & charcoal, 54,165,236 bushels. Pig iron made, 564,755,tons.

Pig iron used, 345,553 tons; old metal do., 11,416 do.; ore do., 9,851 do.; coal do., 190,891 do.; charcoal do., 2,413,750 bushels. Castings made, 322,745 tons.

Pig metal used, 251,491 tons; blooms, 33,344 do.; ore, 78,787 do.; coal, 538,063 do.; coke and charcoal, 14,510,828 bush. Wrought iron made, 278,044 tons.

Grain, &c., consumed:—Barley, 3,787,195 bush.; corn, 11,067,761 do.; rye, 2,143,927 do.; oats, 56,517 do.; apples, 521,840 do.; molasses, 61,675 hhds.; hops, 1,296 tons. Liquors produced:—Ale, &c., 1,177,924 bbls.; whiskey, &c., 42,133,955 gallons; rum, 6,500,500 do.

Skins, 81,330; hides, 316,334; & about 6,000,000 sheep, goat, & other small skins not included.

For salt manufactures see report of Secretary of Treasury to House of Representatives 36th Jan., 1854.

Of the male population of the United States the following were the principal employments in 1850:—agricultural implement makers, 1,313; bakers, 14,256; bell & brass-founders, 1,353; black & white-smiths, 99,703; boat-builders, 2,086; book-binders, 3,414; boot & shoe-makers, 130,473; brewers & distillers, 4,854; brick-makers, 11,514; cabinet & chair-makers, 37,359; carpenters, 184,671; cloth-makers, 253; coach-makers, 14,049; cutlers, 892; dyers & bleachers, 3,241; engineers, 11,626; engravers, 2,298; factory hands, 10,869; file-cutters, 291; glass-manufacturers, 3,237; gold & silver-smiths, 3,082; hardware manufac., 819; hat & cap manufac., 11,024; iron-founders, 9,271; iron-workers, 5,008; jewellers, 5,111; laborers, 909,786; lime-burners, 1,013; machinists, 24,095; masons & plasterers, 63,392; mill-wrights, 9,613; miners, 77,410; morocco dressers, 1,923; nail manufac., 2,046 oil-cloth makers, 388; paper-makers, 2,971; plane-makers, 377; plumbers, 1,304; potters, 4,155; powder-makers, 220; printers, 14,740; quarrymen, 1,932; saddle and harness-makers, 22,779; sash & blind-makers, 2,026; ship-carpenters, 14,585; stone & marble-cutters, 14,076; tailors, 52,069; tanners & curriers, 14,988; tobacco & segar-makers, 10,823; type-founders, 211; Watch-makers, 2,901; weavers, 31,872; wheel-wrights, 30,693; woollen manufacturers, 1,087;—total occupied in trades & professions, 5,371,876.

The table annexed will show the progress of manufactures, so far as may be deduced from the capital vested therein in 1840 & 1850, for the decade ending with the latter year:—

Fisheries.—The fisheries of the United States are extremely valuable, & have ever been looked upon as the best nursery for our seamen. A large portion of the first navigators have graduated in this school. From the earliest period of settlement the fisheries have been pursued with ardor, & in fact it may be said that Americans were the first nation that undertook the pursuit of the whale in foreign seas. From pole to pole their vessels are now found, & wherever fish exists there also is the American in pursuit, not including the lake and river fisheries, which in all parts are extensive. The shipping employed in this occupation in 1850 was—in the whale fishery 146,017 tons; in the cod fishery 85,646 tons, & in the mackerel fishery 58,112 tons. All this tonnage belongs to the ports east of New York, & including that city. The principal depots of the whale fishery are New Bedford, which supplies more than half the shipping employed; Nantucket, from which a seventh hails, & Stonington; Gloucester & Barnstable are the chief places engaged in the cod fisheries, & Barnstable in the mackerel fisheries. All the rivers of the Atlantic have shad fisheries, & in the larger bays the herring fisheries are very valuable. Salmon, pike, trout, & a great variety of others, are abundant in the rivers; & on the coasts from Maine to Florida the fisheries are carried on chiefly for the supply of the home market. Oyster-beds are also very extensive; & these bivalves, having become almost a national article of diet, are a source of great wealth to the seaboard inhabitants. The Americans have secured to them, by the treaty of 1854, the inshore fisheries of the British provinces. The following exhibits a statement of the national character of the foreign shipping employed in the commerce of the United States:—

Commerce.—As a commercial people the Americans are second only to the British, & in a few years must, as a matter of necessity, stand at the head of commercial nations. The wide difference in the productions of the states creates a large internal movement by railroad, canal, & river. The coasting & lake trade is formed by the same circumstance. No estimate of this internal trade can be formed; but that it is immense must at once be seen. The lake commerce alone is valued at $350,000,000 annually, & is constantly being increased as emigration passes westward. Our foreign commerce extends to every civilized country.

The total value of exports of the growth, produce, & manufacture, of the United States, for the year ending June 30th, 1853, according to the report of the Register of the Treasury, was $213,417,697. The value of the three leading products of the Southern States, cotton, tobacco, & rice, amounted to $122,433,381, leaving a balance of $90,984,316 for all other products & manufactures. We have omitted in this statement sugar, chiefly from Louisiana, as only 672,274 lbs., valued at $33,854, was exported during the year. The gold & silver coin exported amounted to $23,548,535, which, if taken from the balance ($90,984,316), after deducting the value of the cotton, tobacco, & rice, leaves $67,435,781 for all other exports of the growth, produce, & manufacture, of the United States. A portion of the tobacco exported, we know not how large, is the product of the Northern & Western States. The leading agricultural exports of the northern & western ports of the Union consist of breadstuffs, & including wheat, flour, Indian corn, Indian & rye meal, amounted in the year, ending as above, to $21,256,034. The following is a statement exhibiting the value of foreign merchandise imported, re-exported, & consumed annually, & the per capita consumption:—

Railroads.—The first within the United States was the Quincy Granite railroad in Massachusetts, 3 miles in length. This was built in 1828. At the present date (1854) there are at least 430 railroads in operation, having an aggregate length of not less than 20,000 miles, & costing nearly 600,000,000 dollars. The following will show approximatively the length of railroad & the aggregative cost thereof in each state:—

States.	Miles.	Cost.	States.	Miles.	Cost.
Maine	420	$14,000,000	Florida	23	$200,000
New Hampshire	582	17,500,000	Alabama	380	6,000,000
Vermont	427	14,500,000	Mississippi	240	4,500,000

The progress of railroad construction from 1828 to the present time is exhibited in the following table of aggregates, being the number of miles open for travel at the end of each year:—

Years.	Miles.	Years.	Miles.	Years.	Miles.	Years.	Miles.
1828	3	1835	918	1842	3,877	1849	6,350
1829	28	1836	1,102	1843	4,174	1850	8,655
1830	41	1837	1,421	1844	4,311	1851	10,896
1831	54	1838	1,843	1845	4,511	1852	13,122
1832	131	1839	1,920	1846	4,870	1853	16,850
1833	576	1840	2,167	1847	5,336	1851	20,619
1834	762	1841	3,319	1848	5,682

About 4,000 miles of the lines in operation are double track railroads. About 25,000 miles of new road are proposed, & the companies mostly chartered; & it is estimated that about one-half that length is already in various stages of construction.

Canals.—The principal canals in the United States have a total length of 5,076 miles, & are distributed to the several states in the following proportions:—

Maine	50 miles.	North Carolina	14 miles.
New Hampshire	12 "	South Carolina	53 "
Vermont	1 "	Georgia	28 "
Massachusetts	90 "	Alabama	52 "
Rhode Island	6 "	Louisiana	101 "
Connecticut	6 "	Kentucky (river improved)	480 "
New York	996 "	Illinois	100 "
New Jersey	148 "	Indiana	426 "
Pennsylvania	1,166 "	Ohio	972 "
Delaware	14 "
Maryland	184 "	Total	5,076 "
Virginia	182 "

The longest canals are the "Erie," connecting the lake of the same name with the Hudson river, 364 miles; the Wabash & Erie canal in Indiana, 368 miles; the Ohio & Erie canal in Ohio, 307 miles; the Chesapeake & Ohio canal in Maryland, 184 miles; the James River canal in Virginia, 148 miles; & several other canals in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, & Ohio, are more than 100 miles. The Illinois & Michigan canal, which unites the Lake with the Mississippi Valley, is 100 miles.

Magnetic Telegraphs.—The United States, in the person of Professor Morse, was the first among commercial nations to adapt electricity to the communication of ideas between distant points; & has ever stood pre-eminent in the length of line used, & in the extent to which this means of correspondence is applied. In 1854 there were in use within the country, 41,392 miles of wires, of which 36,972 miles were using instruments on Morse's plan; 3,850 miles those on House's plan; & 570 miles that of Bain. The capital invested in these lines makes a total of $6,671,800, of which $5,545,800 represented the Morse lines; $955,000 the House lines; & $171,000 the Bain lines. "Only ten years ago," says Shaffner, "Professor Morse was building the experimental line between Washington & Baltimore. That forty miles was the longest telegraph line in the world. Since then the web has been spread from city to city, & people throughout the entire land enjoy the blessings of this element of nature, subdued to the utility of man." It is now proposed to lay wires beneath the ocean from America to Europe; & there is no doubt that ten years from this time such will have been accomplished; & not only this, but even the world will be encircled by the magic wire.

Government.—The government of the United States is a federal democratic republic. It is based on the constitution of 1787, & amendments thereto. The electors of the most numerous branch of the several state legislatures are qualified electors in the states respectively for all elective officers of the general government. All legislative powers are vested in Congress, which consists of a Senate & House of Representatives. The House is composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states, & in number in accordance with the population of each. Each state is entitled to at least one representative. The following table shows the number to which each state has been entitled under the decennial apportionments:—

In addition to these representatives from states, the House admits a delegate from each organized Territory, who has the right to debate on subjects in which his Territory is interested, but cannot vote.

The "Senate" consists of two members from each State, elected by the Legislatures thereof respectively for six years. One-third the whole body is renewed biennially, & if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any state, the executive of such state makes a temporary appointment until the next meeting of the Legislature, which fills such vacancy. The Vice-president of the United States is ex officio President of the Senate; but a president pro tempore is elected by & from among the Senators, who in the absence of the president acts in his stead. Besides its ordinary legislative capacity, the Senate is vested with certain judicial functions, & its members constitute a High Court of Impeachment. No person can be convicted by this court unless on the finding of a majority of Senators; nor does judgment extend further than to removal from office & disqualification. The party impeached, however, is still liable to ordinary proceedings. Representatives have the sole power of impeachment.

The Executive Power is vested in a President, who is elected by an Electoral College, chosen by popular vote, or by the Legislature of the state, the number of electors being equal to the number of Senators & Representatives from the states to Congress. His term of office is four years, but he is eligible for re-election indefinitely. The electors forming the college are themselves chosen in the manner prescribed by the laws of the several states. A majority of the aggregate number of votes given is necessary to the election of President & Vice-president, & if none of the candidates has such a majority, then the election of President is determined by the House of Representatives, & that of the Vice-president by the Senate, from among the three candidates having the highest number of electoral votes; & in doing so, the vote is taken by states, the representatives of each state having only one vote, which must, of course, be determined by a majority of their number. No person can be President or Vice-president who is not a native-born citizen, of the age of thirty-five years, and who has not been a resident of the United States for fourteen years. The President is commander-in-chief of the army & navy, & of the militia when in the service of the Union. With the concurrence of two-thirds of the Senate, he has the power to make treaties, appoint civil & military officers, levy war, conclude peace, & do all that rightly belongs to the executive power. He has a veto on all laws passed by Congress, but so qualified, that notwithstanding his disapproval, any bill becomes a law on its being afterward approved of by two-thirds of both houses of Congress. The President has a salary of $25,000 per annum, & "the White House" at Washington for a residence during his official term. The Vice-president is ex-officio President of the Senate; and in case of the death, resignation, or other disability of the President, the powers & duties of that office devolve upon him for the remainder of the term for which the President had been elected. This provision of the Constitution, for the first time since the foundation of the government, came into operation in 1841, on the demise of the late lamented President Harrison, who died 4th April, just one month after his inauguration, when John Tyler, the Vice-president, succeeded. Vice-president Fillmore also succeeded President Taylor under this provision. In case of the disability of the Vice-president, the President of the Senate pro tempore takes his place. The offices of President & Vice-president have been occupied by the following gentlemen since the adoption of the Constitution:—

The administrative business of the nation is conducted by several officers, with the title of secretaries, etc., who form what is termed the "Cabinet." These are the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, the Secretary of the Interior, & the Attorney-General—the last being the official law authority for advisement in administrative affairs. Each of these presides over a separate Department.

The Federal Army.—The United States for military affairs is divided into three divisions—the Eastern, the Western, & Pacific—& these are subdivided into eleven departments, each of which contains several forts. The standing army is very small, & is intended only as a nucleus around which, in case of emergency, an army might gather. The staff consists of a commander-in-chief (the President ex officio), a general-in-chief, two brigadier generals, 1 adjutant general, 13 assistant adjutants general, 1 judge advocate general, 2 inspectors general, 1 quartermaster general, 2 assistant & 2 deputy quartermasters general, 5 quartermasters, 29 assistant quartermasters, 2 military storekeepers, 1 commissary general of subsistence, 1 assistant commissary general, 10 commissaries of subsistence, 1 surgeon general, 22 surgeons, 72 assistant surgeons, 1 paymaster general, 2 deputy paymasters general, 25 paymasters, & 4 aids-de-camp to generals; a corps of engineers, a corps of topographical engineers, & an ordnance corps; & the army proper consists of 2 regiments of dragoons, 1 regiment of mounted riflemen, 4 regiments of artillery, & 8 regiments of infantry. The grand aggregate of the army is made up of 10,243 men of all arms, of whom 959 are commissioned officers, & 9,284 enlisted men. There are national arsenals at Springfield, Mass., Harpers Ferry, Va., Watervliet, N. Y., Alleghany, Pa., St. Louis, Mo., Watertown, N. Y., Fort Monroe, Va., Frankford, Pa., New York, N. Y., Charleston, S. C., & Benicia, Cal. Officers of the army are educated at the Military Academy of West Point, on the Hudson river.

The principal reliance for defence is on the militia of the several states, which in 1852 numbered two million one hundred & eighty thousand four hundred & eighty-six, as exhibited in the following table; showing, also, the number of permanent military posts or forts, & the number of arsenals, in each state:—

In addition to the 93 military posts enumerated in the preceding table, there are four others—Fort Laramie & Fort Kearney on the Oregon route, Fort Atkinson on the Santa Fé route, & Fort Gibson in the Cherokee Nation.

The National Navy.—The naval force of the Union consists of 11 ships of the line, 15 frigates, 20 sloops, 4 brigs, 2 schooners, 16 steamers, & 5 store ships. There are also now building 6 first class steam frigates. There are navy yards at Portsmouth, N. H., Boston, Mass., New York, N. Y., Philadelphia, Pa., Washington, D. C., Norfolk, Va., Pensacola, Flor., & Memphis, Tenn.; naval dry docks at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Pensacola, & San Francisco; naval hospitals & naval magazines at the first five of the last named places. Connected with the navy, there is also the National Observatory, at Washington, the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, & the Naval Asylum, at Philadelphia. The navy is divided into six squadrons—the East Indian, the Pacific, the African, the Brazilian, the Mediterranean, & the Home (West Indian) Squadrons. The marine corps is organized as a brigade, & consists of 1,203 enlisted men & 64 commissioned officers.

Post Offices.—The whole number of post offices in the Union on the 30th June, 1854, was 23,320, and the number of post routes was 6,697, their aggregate length being 219,395 miles. The annual transportation of mails cost $5,517,312. There are 16,621 miles of railroads, and 16,329 of steamboat routes. There were also in operation seven ocean mail routes, of the estimated aggregate length of 21,000 miles.

The Federal Judiciary.—The judicial powers of the United States government are vested in a Supreme Court, and such other inferior courts as Congress may from time to time establish. The present judicial establishment consists of a Supreme Court, Circuit Courts, and District Courts.

The Attorney-general of the United States is the chief law officer of the government, and as such is considered a member of the Cabinet. He is the consititutional legal adviser and defender of the government. The "Supreme Court," the highest judicial tribunal of the Union, is composed of a Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices, the Attorney-general, Reporter, and a clerk. The court is held in Washington, and has one session annually, commencing on the first Monday in December. The trial of issues in fact in this court, in all actions against citizens, is by jury. The "Circuit Courts" are held by a Justice of the Supreme Court, assigned to the Circuit, and by the Judge of the District in which the court sits, conjointly. The United States is divided into nine judicial circuits, in each State composing which a court is held twice a year. The "District Court" is held by a District Judge alone. Each State is one or more districts, for the purpose of holding District or Circuit Courts. Alabama and Tennessee are divided into three districts; New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Iowa, and California, into two districts; and all other States are single districts respectively. There are also Territorial Courts, which are temporary, and lose that character whenever a Territory becomes a State. They are generally composed of a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices. Each court has a clerk, a public attorney or prosecutor, and a marshal. All judges, marshals, and attorneys, are appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Clerks are appointed by the courts severally.

Public Finance.—The receipts into the Treasury during the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1854, was $73,549,705; viz., from customs, $64,224,190; from sales of public lands, $8,470,798; and from miscellaneous sources, $854,716. These sums, with a balance of $21,942,892 remaining from preceding year, made a total means amounting to $95,492,597. The expenditures for the same year amounted to $48,176,590; viz., civil list, $4,649,384; foreign intercourse, $7,726,677; miscellaneous, $13,531,310. Departments—Interior, $2,609,054; War, $11,783,629, and Navy, $10,768,192, and public debt, $24,356,380. Balance in Treasury at end of fiscal year, $20,137,967. The public debt on the 29th November, 1854, amounted to $34,075,450.

The estimated receipts for the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1855, were as follows:

From customs	$51,000,000 00
From lands	3,500,000 00
Miscellaneous	500,000 00
Total	$55,000,000 00
Add estimated balance in the Treasury July 1, 1854	11,266,404 62
Estimated resources for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1855	66,266,404 62

The estimated expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1855, are as follows:

Balance of former appropriations to be expended during the year	$6,865,126 44
Permanent and indefinite appropriations to be expended during the year	8,285,716 14
Specific appropriations asked for the service of the year	35,009,434 54
Making an aggregate of		51,000,277 12
Leaving in the Treasury July 1, 1855, a balance of		$15,206,327 50

The National Mint.—The Mint of the United States is located at Philadelphia, with branch mints at Dahlonega, Ga., Charlotte, S. C., New Orleans, La., & San Francisco, Cal., & an Assay Office at New York. The two last named have only recently gone into operation, & no statistics relative to their doings have been yet published. In 1852 the deposits of gold & silver in the mint & its three old branches amounted to $56,788,479, of which $55,717,488 was gold, & $1,070,991 silver. The coinage for the same year amounted to $58,206,373; namely—gold, $56,846,187; silver, $1,309,555; & copper, $50,631. Up to the end of the year 1852, the total coinage from 1793 had been—gold, $236,791,615; silver, $79,581,517; & copper, $1,446,477;—total, $316,769,609. The coinage since the discovery of gold in California had been as follows:—

Year.	Gold.	Silver.	Total (including Copper.)	Year.	Gold.	Silver.	Total (including Copper.)
1848	$3,775,512	$2,040,050	$5,879,720	1852	56,846,187	1,309,555	58,206,573
1849	9,007,761	2,114,950	11,164,691	1853	51,888,880	1,570,514	55,802,513
1850	31,981,733	1,866,100	33,892,301

We have thus the amount of gold of California production received at the mints up to the 1st of November, except the deposits of the last three months at the branch mints, which are not likely to have been of sufficient magnitude to make them material to our purpose. The next thing to be considered is the amount of specie exported from the United States, & this we are enabled to exhibit with sufficient accuracy. Official documents show that the entire exports & imports of specie from 1847 (the famine year) to 1853 were as follows:—

	Imports.	Exports.		Imports.	Exports.
1847	$24,121,289	$1,907,739	1850	$4,628,792	$7,582,994
1848	6,360,224	15,841,620	1851	5,453,592	29,472,752
1849	6,651,240	5,404,648	1852	5,503,544	42,674,135
Totals				$52,718,681	$102,823,888
					52,718,961
Net export of specie for six years					$50,105,207
Add exports for first ten months of 1853, as ascertained from returns and estimates, say					25,000,000
Total exports of specie					$75,105,207

The whole question, then, may be briefly stated as follows:—

Receipts of California gold to October 31st, 1853	$203,886,025 97
Exports of specie from 1847 to October 31st, 1853	75,105,207 00
Net increase of specie	$128,780,818 97

It will doubtless surprise many to see it thus clearly demonstrated that there is at the present time nearly $130,000,000 more of specie in the United States than there was in 1846.

Educational Establishments, Libraries, &c.—The people of the United States, from the earliest settlement of the country, have been very attentive to the cause of popular education; & the legislatures of the several states have appropriated large sums for the suppport of common or free schools. Most of the older states have large school funds set apart for the education of the mass of the people, & in the newly-settled states the general government has appropriated 1 square mile of the public lands in every township of 36 sq. miles, to be disposed of for the support of a public school within the township. The amount of land thus reserved for educational purposes is computed to amount to 12,000,000 of acres; & the tribes of Indians disposing of their lands to the United States have a large annuity granted them for purposes of education. In less than 20 years from the landing of the Pilgrims on the rock at Plymouth, Cambridge college was established, & about 170 universities & colleges have since been established. In the following enumeration, theological & medical institutions, when they are separate from colleges, are ranked amongst universities & colleges. In the academies, the ancient & modern languages, grammar, history, logic, rhetoric, natural & moral philosophy, &c., are taught. The common schools are extensively provided with libraries, & appropriate apparatus for illustrating the sciences taught in them. There are 75 theological seminaries (belonging to the several different denominations of Christians), designed to succeed a collegiate course; 20 law schools in different parts of the Union; 44 medical schools, some of them connected with colleges, & 10 of practical science. Besides these, there are the National Military Academy at West Point, which has established a world-wide celebrity, & the Naval Academy at Annapolis; the Smithsonian Institute, "for the increase & diffusion of knowledge among men;" several educational associations; institutions for the instruction of the deaf & dumb, & for the blind, & asylums for the insane. The number of primary & public schools on the 1st June, 1850, was 80,991, with 92,000 teachers & 3,354,173 scholars—annual income, $9,591,530; of academies & other schools, 6,032, with 12,207 teachers & 261,362 pupils—annual income, $4,653,842; & of universities & colleges, 234, with 1,651 teachers & 27,159 students—annual income, $1,916,628. The amount of public funds disbursed on account of education in the year ending at the above date, was $2,874,016. Adults unable to read & write, 1,053,420; namely, 962,898 whites, & 90,522 free colored, or 858,306 natives, & 195,114 foreigners.

Libraries.—The number of libraries (other than private) in 1850 was 15,615 (containing 4,636,411 volumes); of which 1,217 (1,446,015) were public; 12,067 (1,647,404) school; 1,988 (542,321) Sunday school; 213 (941,321) college; & 130 (58,350) church libraries.

Newspapers and Periodicals.—The aggregate number of newspapers & periodicals published in the United States in 1850, according to the census, was 2,526, circulating 5,183,017 copies, or 426,409,978 copies annually. Of this number 254 were issued daily, 115 tri-weekly, 31 semi-weekly, 1,902 weekly, 95 semi-monthly, 100 monthly, & 19 quarterly; and, classified in relation to their characteristics, 568 were literary & miscellaneous, 83 neutral & independent, 1,630 political, 191 religious, & 53 scientific.

Religion, &c.—The constitution of the United States forbids the establishment of religion by law; but every person who does not interrupt the peace of society, is protected in the free exercise of his religious opinions. The voluntary principle, as it is aptly termed, has been found to be more efficient than any legal enactment for the support of religious institutions. The union of church & state is regarded by the people of the United States as most pernicious, & as that which is calculated to corrupt the pure stream of religious sentiment, while it affords no benefit to the state. But no people are more sensible of the fact; that the stability, & even the existence, of a free government, depend upon the prosperity of religious institutions, & their benignant & moral influence upon the principles & habits of the mass of the populace. This, combined with the mighty elevator "universal education," sustains the republic, & is the great secret of its success. It furnishes encouragement to the friends of freedom throughout the universe, & exerts a powerful influence on all the civilized nations of the earth. The whole number of churches in 1850 was 38,061, with accommodation for 14,234,855 persons; & the church property was valued at $87,328,801; viz.:—

History.—A few historical facts connected with the formation of the original Union, & the admission of new states, will not be out of place in this connection. On Monday, the 5th September, 1774, there were assembled at Carpenter's Hall, in the City of Philadelphia, a number of men who had been chosen & appointed by the several Colonies in North America to hold a Congress for the purpose of discussing certain grievances imputed against the mother country. This Congress resolved on the next day that each colony should have one vote only. On Tuesday, the 2d July, 1776, the Congress resolved, "That these United Colonies are, & of right ought to be, Free and Independent States," etc., etc.; & on Thursday, the 4th July, the whole Declaration of Independence having been agreed upon, it was publicly read to the people. Shortly after, on the 9th September, it was resolved that the words "United Colonies" should be no longer used, & that the "United States of America" should thenceforward be the style & title of the Union. On Saturday, the 15th November, 1777, "Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union of the United States of America" were agreed to by the state delegates, subject to the ratification of the state Legislatures severally. Eight of the states ratified these articles on the 9th July, 1778; one on the 21st July; one on the 24th July; one on the 26th November of the same year; one on the 22d February, 1779; & the last one on the 1st March, 1781. Here was a bond of union between thirteen independent states, whose delegates in Congress legislated for the general welfare, & executed certain powers, so far as they were permitted by the articles aforesaid. The following are the names of the Presidents of the Continental Congress from 1774 to 1788:—

Peyton Randolph, Virginia	5th Sept., 1774	John Hanson, Maryland	5th Nov., 1781
Henry Middleton, S. Carolina	22d Oct., 1774	Elias Boudinot, New Jersey	4th " 1782
Peyton Randolph, Virginia	10th May, 1775	Thomas Mifflin, Pennsylvania	3d " 1783
John Hancock, Massachusetts	24th " 1775	Richard Henry Lee, Virginia	30th " 1784
Henry Laurens, S. Carolina	1st Nov., 1777	Nathaniel Gorham, Mass	6th Jan., 1786
John Jay, New York	10th Dec., 1778	Arthur St. Clair, Pennsylvania	2d Feb., 1787
Samuel Huntingdon, Conn	28th Sept., 1779	and
Thomas McKean, Delaware	10th July, 1781	Cyrus Griffin, Virginia	22d Jan., 1788

The seat of government was established as follows:—at "Philadelphia," Pa., commencing 5th Sept., 1774, & 10th May, 1775; at "Baltimore," Md., 20th Dec., 1776; at "Philadelphia," Pa., 4th March, 1777; at "Lancaster," Pa., 27th Sept., 1777; at "York," Pa., 30th Sept., 1777; at "Philadelphia," Pa., 2d July, 1778; at "Princeton," N. J., 30th June, 1783; at "Annapolis," Md., 26th Nov., 1783; at "Trenton," N. J., 1st Nov., 1784; & at "New York City," N. Y., 11th Jan., 1785.

On the 4th March, 1789, the present Constitution, which had been adopted by a convention & ratified by the requisite number of states, went into operation, & thus a more perfect union for the general good was formed. The dates at which the State Legislatures severally ratified this instrument are given in the annexed table:—

Original States.	Date of Ratification.	Original States.	Date of Ratification.
Delaware	7th December, 1787	South Carolina	23d May, 1788
Pennsylvania	12th " 1787	New Hampshire	21st June, 1788
New Jersey	18th " 1787	Virginia	26th " 1788
Georgia	2d January, 1788	New York	26th July, 1788
Connecticut	9th " 1788	North Carolina	21st March, 1789
Massachusetts	2d February, 1788	and
Maryland	28th April, 1788	Rhode Island	29th May, 1790

The privilege of becoming members of the Union by ratifying the Constitution was confined to those states that were parties to the confederation by which the Constitution had been framed. The Constitution had been adopted by the convention on the 17th day of September, 1787. It required that nine states should ratify it before its provisions could go into effect. Congress, on the 13th September, 1788, determined that as a sufficient number of states had ratified it—eleven having done so—it should become operative on the first Wednesday (the 4th) March, 1789. North Carolina & Rhode Island had not yet given it sanction; but as soon as they acceded to its provisions, they were admitted to a participation of its blessings.

"On the first Wednesday of January, 1789, electors of President and Vice-president were appointed. The electors met on the first Wednesday of February, 1789, and General George Washington, 'first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen,' was unanimously chosen President, and John Adams was chosen Vice-president. WASHINGTON was inaugurated as first President on the 30th of April, 1789, in the open gallery of the old Federal hall in New York, where the custom-house now stands; & never did a heartier shout proceed from the assembled multitude of freemen than that which greeted the conclusion of the ceremony with, 'Long live George Washington.' And now, after an experiment of more than 65 years, after having seen how completely this constitution secures all the purposes of a good government, and at how cheap a rate, the fear and trembling which marked its commencement are exchanged for steadfast confidence and unbounded hope: it stands like a beacon on the shore of the sea of liberty, to direct the political voyager in his perilous course to the port of freedom. The authority and the boundaries of the several departments of the government, are becoming daily better settled and understood, and it is striking a deeper root in the sentiments of the people. Every fourth of July gives increasing proof of the attachment of the citizens to their excellent form of government, and affords increasing evidence of its stability and perpetuity; and the citizen cannot be found who would be willing to exchange it for any other government on the earth."

Eighteen new states have been admitted into the Union since the confederation of the original thirteen colonies, as follows:—

1. Vermont, which formed a part of the territory of New York & New Hampshire, was admitted on the 4th March, 1791.

2. Kentucky, which was formerly a part of Virginia, was admitted on the 1st June, 1792.

3. Tennessee, formed from the territory ceded to the United States by North Carolina, & which afterward was known as the "Territory south of the Ohio River," was admitted on the 1st June, 1796.

4. Ohio, the first state formed from the "Territory north-west of the Ohio River"—a territory which had been ceded to the United States by Virginia & other claimants, & which was erected into a government as early as 1787, was admitted on the 29th November, 1802.

5. Louisiana, a part of the vast territory of the same name, purchased of France by the United States in 1803, & subsequently known as the Territory of Orleans, was admitted on the 8th April, 1812.

6. Indiana, the second state formed to the north-west of the Ohio, was admitted within its present limits on the 11th December, 1816.

7. Mississippi, which was formed from the territory ceded to the United States by South Carolina & Georgia, was admitted on the 10th December, 1817.

8. Illinois, the third of the North-western states, was admitted on the 3d December, 1818.

9. Alabama, the second state formed from the South Carolina & Georgia cessions, was admitted on the 14th December, 1819.

10. Maine, originally a province of Massachusetts, but having been permitted to frame a state government by that state, was admitted on the 15th March, 1820.

11. Missouri, the second state formed from the French purchase, was admitted on the 10th August, 1821.

12. Arkansas, the third state formed from the Louisiana cession, was admitted on the 15th June, 1836.

13. Michigan, the fourth state formed from the Territory north-west of the Ohio River, was admitted on the 26th January, 1837.

14. Florida, which has the same limits as when ceded by Spain, was admitted on the 3d March, 1845.

15. Texas, which had been an Independent Republic for the ten preceding years, was admitted by a joint resolution of both Houses of Congress on the 29th December, 1845.

16. Iowa, the fourth state formed from the Territory of Louisiana, was admitted on the 28th December, 1846.

17. Wisconsin, the fifth state formed from the Territory north-west of the Ohio River, was admitted on the 29th May, 1848.

And 18. California, having been governed as a state for upward of a year, was admitted on the 9th September, 1850; & though the last, it is by no means the least important of the members of the great confederacy.

Besides these thirty-one states which send representatives to Congress, in number according to their population, there are several local & dependent governments, which are styled "Territories of the United States." Such are the territories of Oregon, Washington, Utah, New Mexico, Minnesota, Nebraska, & Kansas. The territory which may with propriety be named Mesilla, lying south of the Gila, & which was acquired of Mexico in 1854, is not yet organized; nor has the vast territory set apart for the Indians any aggregate existence, but each Indian nation, within its own limits, is governed by its own laws.

1. Oregon was erected into a territory on the 14th August, 1848; 2, Minnesota on the 3d March, 1849; & 3, Utah, & 4, New Mexico, on the 9th September, 1850; 5, Washington, originally a part of Oregon, was formed into a separate territory at the session of Congress, 1852–'53; 6, Nebraska, & 7, Kansas, both erected in 1854, from the north-western portion of the old Louisiana cession, between the Rocky Mountains & the States of Missouri & Iowa, & the territory of Minnesota; & extending north & south between the 37th & 49th parallels of north latitude.

8. The District of Columbia, or Federal District, is under the immediate authority of Congress, & is not represented in that body. It is, & has been since 1800, the seat of the general government.

UNITED ORANGE RIVER FREE STATE, S. Africa, a republic formed in the early part of the year 1854 (formerly the Orange River Sovereignty). It is comprised between the Nu Gariep river on the S., and the Ky Gariep or Vaal river on the N. Length 375 m. Area about 50,000 square miles. It is divided into 4 states or departments; viz., Bloemfontein, Caledon, Vaal River, & Winberg; each the seat of a resident magistracy. It is mostly an immense plain, covered with grass; has numerous streams, supplying sources both of natural & artificial irrigation; & is admirably adapted for the rearing of cattle & sheep. The executive power is in the hands of a President. There is also a "Volks Raad," or legislative council. The Legislature met for the first time on the 27th of March, under a provisional President, & continued in session three weeks. Among other acts passed was the one fixing the election of a "Staats President" on the 15th of May following. The capital is at Bloemfontein.

No reports were received from the towns of Tooele, in Tooele county, and Mountainville, in Utah county, and their returns are not, consequently, embraced in either of the above tables.

The eastern portion of Utah is drained by the Colorado river of the Gulf of California. Its valley has been but imperfectly explored, but as far as our knowledge exists of it, a very small portion of it only can be brought into cultivation. The remaining portion of Utah is comprised in the Great Basin, and forms a distinct and most peculiar region. The rivers all terminate within its limits, in lakes with no visible outlets. The Great Salt Lake is about 35 m. broad, and 70 long, and the waters contain more salt than can be held in solution, hence its borders abound with crystallized salt, and the bottom of the lake is incrusted with it. No living creature can exist in its waters. The valleys are susceptible of cultivation, and are very fertile, where they can be irrigated. Timber, although scarce, is very durable, and iron ore exists in the mountain ridges, and several furnaces are already in operation smelting it. The temperature is more uniform in the Great Salt Lake valley than on the Atlantic coast; it rarely falls below zero. There is but little rain, except on the mountains, from March to October.

There were, in this ter., in 1850, 16,338 acres of land improved, and 39,516 of unimproved by farms; cash value of farms $311,790, and the value of implements and machinery $34,288. Live stock—horses, 2,429; asses & mules, 325; milch cows, 4,861; working oxen, 5,266; other cattle, 2,489; sheep, 3,262; swine, 914; value of live stock, $546,968. Agricultural Products, &c.—wheat, 107,702 bush. produced; rye, 210; Ind. corn, 9,899; oats, 10,900; barley, 1,799; buckwheat, 332; peas & beans, 289; potatoes, 43,968; sweet do. 60 bush. Value of produce of market gardens, $23,868; pounds of butter made, 88,309; of cheese, 30,908; molasses, 58 gallons; beeswax & honey, 10 lbs.; wool, lbs. produced, 9,222; flax, 550; hops, 50; tobacco, 70; tons of hay, 4,805; clover seeds, 2 bush.; flax seed, 5; value of home-made manufactures, $1,382; of slaughtered animals, $87,985.

The capital is Fillmore City, but the Great Salt Lake city is where the legislature meets, and it is also the residence of the governor. The other towns are Palmyra, Springville, Provo, Cedar, Parowan, Manti, Lehi, Brownsville, &c.

The governor is appointed by the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate, for a term of four years. The legislature consists of a council and a house of representatives. Every free white person 21 years of age, and a citizen of the United States, is a qualified elector.

Utah is a part of Alta California, which was ceded to the United States at the treaty of Guadeloupe Hidalgo, Feb. 1848. Previous to the Mexican war, this region was only known to the trappers & Indians, except the portion traversed by Fremont & his party & others, on the several exploring tours over the continent. About the time of the opening of the war with Mexico, the Mormons were driven from Nauvoo, in Illinois, by the violence of a mob, and sought a temporary refuge on the banks of the Missouri, on the W. border of Iowa: from this place they commenced their emigration to the Great Salt Lake, and founded the Great Salt Lake city. At which place, and its immediate vicinity, in 2 years after they had possessed the country, they numbered over 5,000. They organized a temporary government under the title of the State of Deseret; but the U. S. government established a territory by the present name of Utah, on the 9th Sept., 1850, since which time the population has increased by the emigration from all parts of the earth, of converts to "the faith," more especially from Wales, and other parts of Britain.

UTAH, river & lake, Utah. The river rises in the Waysatch mountains, and flows in a N. direction into Utah lake. This lake also receives the Timpanogos, & other mountain streams from the E. Its waters are sweet, and it abounds with various kinds of fish. Its outlet is the "River Jordan," of the Mormons, which conveys its surplus waters into the Great Salt Lake.

UTAH county, Utah ter., extends from the Rocky mountain range to the Tooele mountains, a distance of 360 m., 30 m. in width, equal to 10,800 sq. m. It has the sources of Grand river on the E., & is crossed centrally by the Green river, & is drained by its branches, White & Uintah rivers. In the western part lies the Utah lake, which receives from the Timpanogos mountains the noted Timpanogos river, & also Spanish Fork, and the Utah r., from the Wahsatch mountains. Cap., Provo City. There were, in 1850, live stock valued at $103,952; wheat, 13,142 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 1,460; oats, 1,376; potatoes, 5,882. Pop. 1853, 4,064.

VALLEY FORGE, p-v., Schuylkill t., Chester co., Pa., 20 N.W. Philadelphia, 81 E. by S. Harrisburg, 159 W. Situated at the junction of Valley creek with Schuylkill r. It contains 2 stores, a cotton fac., 2,000 spindles, a rolling mill, a gun fac., a flouring m., and about 300 inhabitants. A forge, early established here, gave to this place the name of Valley Forge. Upon the mountain flanks of this valley, which overlook all the adjacent country, WASHINGTON established the winter quarters of the army in 1777–8. This was the most gloomy period of the Revolution. That band of heroic men, & their illustrious commander, reached the valley about the middle of December. They might have been tracked by the blood of their feet in marching to this place barefooted over the hard frozen ground. The encampment was surrounded on the land side by intrenchments, and several redoubts were built at different points. Some of the intrenchments may still be seen.

VAN (PASHALIC OF), a territory of Turkish Armenia, between lat. 37° & 39° 30′ N., & lon. 41° & 44° 30′ E., having E. Persia, & on other sides the pashs. Kars, Erzeroum, Diarbekir, & Mosul. It consists chiefly of a lofty basin surrounded by steep mountains, & the centre of which is occupied by the L. of Van, the estimated area of which is 1,200 sq. m.; but it has some outlying dists., as the sanjaks Bayazid on the N., Moosh W., Bitles & Joolamerk S.; their caps. of same names being, with Van, its chief towns. Climate hot in the plains, & on the uplands less severe than in the pash. Erzeroum; corn raised not sufficient for home consumption; fruits, wine, flax, tobacco, cotton, timber, gall-nuts, manna, & honey, are the chief products. Pastures are excellent; great numbers of live stock are reared, & with other rural produce, constitute the chief exports. Pop. chiefly Armenian Christians in the N., elsewhere Mohammedans; Turks occupying the centre, & Koord tribes the S. part of the pashalic. —Van (ancient Artemita), cap. of pash., is a fortified city, on the E. shore of the Lake of Van, 145 m. S.E.

Erzeroum. Pop. variously estimated at 12,000 and 40,000. It stands enclosed by a double line of ramparts, at the S. face of an isolated rock, crowned by its citadel; it is ill built, but has several large Armenian churches, mosques, baths, caravanserais, &c.; bazaars abundantly supplied with produce raised in the vicinity, & some massive & remarkable antiquities, which have been attributed to Semiramis. About 500 looms here are reported to be employed in manufacturing fabrics from cotton imported from Persia, and these goods, with rural produce, constitute its chief exports.

VANCOUVER, (or, more properly, QUADRA and VANCOUVER) ISLAND, Brit. N. A., between lat. 48° 20′ & 51° N., and lon. 123° & 128 W., separated from the mainland by Queen Charlotte Sound & the Gulf of Georgia. Length, N.W. to S.E., 300 m., greatest breadth 75 m. Estimated area 16,000 sq. m., and pop. 11,463. Surface mountainous & richly wooded. On its W. coast are Nootka Sound, & many other harbors.

The island is intersected by high mountain ranges, but it has notwithstanding a considerable extent of level and undulating land susceptible of cultivation. Soils very various, being principally, however, of a friable description. The best is a black vegetable mould, producing a most luxuriant vegetation. Climate peculiarly mild, but in winter the rains, accompanied with violent thunder-storms, are heavy, & almost incessant, the smallest brooks being then swollen to impassable torrents, &, in summer, though there is but little rain, dews are heavy, & fogs frequent & dense. Hence, it is doubtful, notwithstanding the aptitude of the soil, whether the country be suitable for the production of wheat & barley, which have hitherto been tried only on a very small scale. Probably, however, it may not be too moist for oats; & the potato, which is extensively raised by the natives, is said to thrive remarkably well. The growth of timber is most luxuriant. Pine, spruce, red and white oak, ash, cedar, maple, &c., are found in the utmost profusion, the cedar & pine attaining to an immense size. The land animals comprise bears, foxes, deer, ermines, squirrels, &c., with a great variety of game. It has been said that the humidity of the climate will hinder this island from ever becoming a wool-growing country: but though it may not produce fine, it may produce coarse, wool: & there can be no doubt of its being well fitted, from the luxuriance of its pastures, for the growth of cattle. The bays, rivers, & adjacent seas, swarm with a variety of fish, including salmon, sturgeon, herrings, &c., with seals, sea otters, tortoises, &c., and they are also resorted to by whales. The harbors of the island are consequently well situated for carrying on an extensive and profitable fishery; & well fitted for shipbuilding. The mineral riches of the island have been very imperfectly explored. Enough, however, is known to establish the important fact, that extensive beds of coal are to be met with in its N.E. parts. In various localities the beds have been found cropping out at the surface, & large supplies have been obtained with but little difficulty & little expense. The native inhabitants subsist principally by hunting and fishing, especially the latter, & by cultivating the potato. They are remarkable for indolence & filth; their heads are flattened when young by artificial means; & their legs are ill-formed, those of the women being frequently swollen. A settlement, established by this country at Nootka Sound in 1788, was suppressed in the following year by the Spaniards, an outrage which nearly occasioned a war with Spain. Since then it has been almost wholly neglected, till within these few years that some establishments have been formed upon it by the Hudson Bay Company. Latterly it has been proposed to make it the site of a colony that should prosecute the seal and whale fishery, for which, as already stated, it is supposed to be peculiarly well situated. And, with a view to the realizing of this project, it has been made over to the Hudson Bay Company, on condition of their establishing a colony within its limits in the course of the five years following 1848. Government.—A Gov. & Com.-in-Chief. Residence Victoria. (Salary paid by the H. B. Co.)

VAN DIEMEN (CAPE), the most N. point of Melville island, N. Australia, lat. 11° 8′ S., lon. 130° 20′ E.—(Gulf), N. Australia, between Arnhem Land, and Coburg peninsula & Melville island, lat. 12° S., lon. 132° E., is 100 m. in length, E. to W., & 60 m. across. It receives Alligator river, & communicates with the ocean N. by Dundas Strait, between the above peninsula & island, & W. by Clarence Strait, between Melville island & the mainland.—(Inlet), N. Australia, on the E. side of the Gulf of Carpentaria, lat. 16° 58′ S. It receives Van Diemen river.—(Land), N. Australia. [Arnhem Land.]

VAN DIEMENS LAND, or TASMANIA, an isl. & British colony off the S. extremity of Australia, from which it is separated by Bass's Strait, & lying between lat. 40° 44′ & 43° 39′ S., & lon. 144° 38′ & 148° 24′ E. It is somewhat heart-shaped, length and greatest breadth each about 180 m. Area estimated at 27,000 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 70,194; of these 45,916 were free, & 24,188 convicts. Van Diemen's Land was originally intended to serve as a penal colony, & it received between 1823 & 1850 no less than 58,243 convicts, but of late years great dissatisfaction was felt by the free settlers, and vigorous measures were taken to effect its suppression; & in 1853 the convict system was abandoned. The native inhabitants, belonging to the Papuan negro race, had dwindled down to about 150 persons, when they were removed by the British government to Great island in Bass's Strait. Surface greatly diversified; on the whole mountainous. Benlomond rises to 4,200 feet, and Wylde's Craig to 4,500 feet in elevation; a chain, called the Western mountains, averaging 3,500 feet, extends N. to S., enclosing many lakes, & scattered over the island are many isolated peaks from 3,000 to 4,000 feet in height. Principal rivers, the Derwent & Jordan flowing S.E., and the Tamar, formed by the N. & S. Esk & Macquarie, and disemboguing on the N. coast. Others are the Isis, Huon, & Clyde. The coasts are greatly indented, especially in the S.E., in which quarter are Storm, Norfolk, & Ralph bays, with Bruné & Maria islands, Tasman & Forestier's peninsulas, & Hobart Town, the cap. Other inlets are Ports Dalrymple & Sorell on the N., & Port Davey & Macquarie harbor on the W. coasts. Some rich flats extend along the rivers, but the country is mostly high, undulating, & with a soil not so fertile as in some parts of Australia. Sandstone, limestone, & basalt are amongst the chief geological formations. Climate more equable than in Australia. Barley, oats, wheat, & potatoes arrive at perfection, & the fruits of N. Europe are cultivated, sheep thrive well, & wool, as in Australia, is a principal export (in 1852, 5,147,755 lbs). In 1848, 171,500 acres were said to be under crop, including about 64,700 in wheat, 14,042 in barley, 29,463 in oats, 3,916 in potatoes, 8,336 in turnips, and 49,000 in grasses; the number of cattle in the same year, 1,800,000 head. Kangaroos are said to be abundant, & several species of whales frequent the coasts. Timber is plentiful. Coal, with iron, copper, & several other metallic ores, are met with, but few, if any, mines are wrought. Ship-building is pretty actively carried on at Hobart Town, & on the banks of the Huon, where vessels of from 20 to 400 tons burden are constructed. In 1848, vessels of an aggregate burden of 91,883 tons entered the ports, chiefly from Great Britain and the British colonies; and there were 209 vessels of the aggregate burden of 18,412 tons, belonging to the colony; of these 29 were engaged in the whale fishery: Exports amounted to 490,281*l.*, & imports to 594,154*l.* The settled part of the island is divided into 11 cos. Principal town, Hobart Town, the cap., & Launceston. Government vested in a lieutenant-governor, an executive council (6 mems.), & legislative council, composed of 22 members, appointed by the crown, & in acts of the British parliament. (Salary of Lt.-Gov., £4,000.) The island was discovered by Tasman in 1642, & subsequently named in honor of a governor of the Dutch E. Indies. It was taken possession of by the British in 1803.

1844 (est.) 1,052,000, & in 1854 (allowing the same ratio of gain as exists in New Granada, a repub. bordering on it), the pop. is about 1,500,000; of these, 598,000 are Spanish Americans, 480,000 of the mixed races, 48,000 Negroes; the remaining portion Indians.

The E. Cordillera of the Andes extends thro' its N. part from W. to E., terminating in the penin. of Paria. S. of this is a wide plain country, traversed by the Orinoco, the whole course of which riv. is in this region. Other principal rivers are the Meta, Apure, Arauca, Carony, tributary to the Orinoco; the Cassiquiare connecting it with the Amazon, & the Tuyuyo, Zulia, & Cuyuni in the N. & E. The lakes Maracaibo & Valencia, & islands Margarita & Tortuga, belong to this republic. All the finest tropical products grow luxuriantly; the principal sources of wealth are cacao, coffee, tobacco, indigo, cotton, sarsaparilla, dyewoods, timber, and especially cattle, & the articles of trade which they yield. Total value of exports $6,000,000 annually, mostly sent to the W. India Islands, the United States, Great Brit., & Spain. Imports comprise woven fabrics, chiefly cottons and linens, flour & provisions, hardwares, soap, wines, & specie. Chief cities, Caracas, the cap., Valencia, Maracaibo, and Barquesimeto. The constitution recognizes as Venezuelan territory all that which was formerly under the jurisdiction of the Captain-General of Venezuela and a citizen is a Venezuelan by birth or naturalization; but to exercise his political rights he must be married or twenty-one years of age, possess a freehold of the annual value of $50, exercise some industry producing twice that amount, or be in public or private employ with a salary of $100 per annum. He must also be able to read & write. The people, however, have only one act of sovereignty, and that is choosing electors, who in their turn make elections. The elections for electors are held in the chief town of each parish, and for each 4,000 inhabitants one elector is chosen, & for any residue over 2,000, one more. An elector must be an eligible citizen 25 years of age, have resided one year in any parish of the cant., be a freeholder of $200 per annum, or exercise a calling or have a salary which produces $400 per annum. He is elected for two years. On the first of October every two years, the electors assemble in the capitals of the provinces, & vote for a President or Vice President of the republic, & elect one-half the senators & representatives, who are chosen for four years. The votes for President & Vice-President are scrutinized by Congress; & if it happens that none of the candidates receive two thirds of the whole number of votes, Congress selects one of three having the highest number. None but native-born citizens can hold the offices of President, Vice-President, members of the Board of Advice, members of the Supreme Court, or become commandants of arms.

Congress is divided into two Chambers—the one that of Representatives, & the other that of Senators. There are two senators from each province, & each province must send at least one representative, and one for every 20,000 inhabitants, & for every fraction over 12,000, one additional. Congress meets on the 20th January of each year. The executive power is vested in the President, & in case of his disability the Vice President acts in his stead. Three secretaries (namely, the Secretary of State & Foreign Affairs, the Secretary of the Interior, & the Secretary of War & Marine) are the necessary organs of the executive power, & these are responsible. In difficult & important cases the President consults the Advising Board or Executive Council, which is composed of the Vice President, an officer of the Supreme Court, chosen by the court itself, four advisers nominated by Congress, & the three secretaries. The President cannot leave the territory during his term of office nor for one year thereafter, nor can he carry the administration of public affairs without the limits of the capital: and in all cases in which he leaves the seat of government, the Vice President takes the executive power pro tem. The President is indigible for re-election for the succeeding term. The President & Vice President must be Venezuelan by birth, be more than 30 years of age, have resided in the country (except on public service abroad) three years in succession before election, be owner of a freehold producing $500 per annum, or exercise some calling which produces $1,000, or enjoy a salary of $1,200. The qualifications requisite for senators & representatives are essentially the same.

The judicial power is vested in the Supreme Court, the Superior Court, the Judges of the First Instance, & the other inferior tribunals. The highest judicial authority is the Supreme Court, composed of five judges. Members of the Supreme Court or other judges cannot be suspended except through an accusation legally admitted, nor deposed save for cause proved & sentence given.

The executive term ends on the 20th January, although Congress may not have ascertained a successor. In the latter case the Vice President acts as President until the question is determined upon & the President inaugurated. The form of government in Venezuela is intermediate between centralism & federalism, and to effect this the constitution, in addition to the general government, provides for what may be termed a municipal power, in the executive head & legislative bodies of the provinces, to which belong certain specified authorities. The provincial legislatures, the members of which are elected at the same time & place, in the same manner, & for the same term as members of Congress, meet on the 1st November each year in the capitals of the provinces, and sit for 30 days (the session may be prolonged to 40 days). As regards provincial deputies, one is sent from each canton, but each province must send at least seven deputies, although the number of cantons in the province be not so many. These bodies watch over the fulfilment of the laws, & denounce infractions or abuses which the public employés may commit; present to the governor the list from which he must choose mayors of cantons, & the employés of the provincial fiscal department; divide among the cantons the extraordinary contributions Congress may order, & assign to each its proportion for keeping up the army & navy, & draw up the budget of expenses for the municipal service. They can establish provincial imposts, raise loans, supervise the public property, organize police, procure the means of primary education, open roads and canals, construct bridges, found hospitals, erect eleemosynary or ornamental & useful establishments, grant exclusive privileges for certain definite periods, erect new villages & towns, alter the sites of old ones, & favor immigration & the colonization of industrious foreigners. The ordinances & resolutions of these bodies pass to the governor, who can object to them within five days. Unless he does, they become municipal laws, as they do also when the subsequent vote in their favor is more than two-thirds of the members. Congress also has the power of disapproving of their acts. The civil jurisdiction of the provinces is under the charge of governors, who are dependent on the national executive power, of which they are the immediate agents. The other public officers are subject to them in all that pertains to order, internal security, & civil & economical government. They can convoke extraordinary sessions of the legislature.

The constitution, in promulgating the system of social organization, declares that all magistrates, judges, and other employés, are agents of the nation, & as such are responsible for their public conduct before the law. The armed force is essentially obedient, & never can deliberate. Those who give as well as those who obey orders contrary to the institutions or laws, are equally culpable. Any civil suit, in whatever stage it may be, may be pacifically settled by arbitration. A Venezuelan's house is inviolable, as are also his letters & private papers. Nobody can direct petitions to the authorities in the name of the people. Everybody can petition in his own name. The right of using the press is free. No one can be judged save by law anterior to his crime, & never by special committees or extraordinary tribunals. No Venezuelan can be obliged to depose on oath in a criminal cause against himself, nor against his immediate relatives; nor can he be arrested without a previous summary of the case against him; and if by the summary it appears that his reputed crime is not one that merits personal punishment, he can be put at liberty under bail at any stage of the proceedings. No portion, however small, of individual property, can be applied to public use without the previous consent of Congress, or a previous indemnification. All kinds of honest callings or professions can be freely exercised by all & every one who chooses. There are no titles of nobility, honors, or hereditary distinctions recognized by the laws—all are equal at the bar of justice. No Venezuelan can be judged by military laws, unless he is actually with the army, & receiving pay as a soldier of the Republic. Foreigners are received on the most favored footing of citizens of Venezuela, & enjoy the same privileges, protection, and security as the natives. When reforms in the Constitution are contemplated, they are to be discussed in one Congress, & then be left pending for four years, when the chambers will be completely renewed; and then, if they are carried by a two-thirds vote, they are passed, & become a part of the fundamental law.

VENICE (Italian Venezia, German Vénedig, ancient Venetia), a fortified city of Austrian Italy, cap. and prov., & one of the two caps. of the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, in the lagoons of Venice, a sort of vast lake, separated from the Adriatic by a long belt of low land, and 2 miles from the continent, with which it is connected by a stupendous bridge of 222 arches, forming part of the railroad to Milan; lat. of St. Mark 45° 25′ 9″ N., lon. 12° 20′ 2″ E. Pop. 1850, 126,768, besides the garrison. Mean temperature of year 55° .3; winter 38°; summer 73° Fahr. It is the see of a Rom. Catholic primate, Greek, & Armenian bishops, & the residence of the viceroy during part of the winter; the centre of the maritime establishments of Austria, and the residence of the commander-general of the imperial marine. Venice, for many centuries, the cap. of a celebrated republic, the first maritime & commercial power of the world, & one of the finest cities in Europe, is unique, both as regards position & construction, being built entirely on piles & occupying 70 or 80 small isls., separated by 149 canals, which are crossed by 306 bridges. The chief of the former is the Canal Grande, 100 to 180 feet wide, & bordered by magnificent palaces & churches; it separates the city into two nearly equal portions, which are connected by the bridge of the Rialto, built of white marble, & consisting of a single arch. The streets or lanes are so narrow & intricate as to render the city a vast labyrinth, & being fit only for foot passengers, the place of wheel carriages is supplied by small barges, called gondolas, the peculiar form & great number of which constantly traversing the principal canals, form one of the chief characteristics of the city. The largest street, the Merceria, in which are the best shops, is only 15 feet wide; the principal promenades are the square of St. Mark; and the public gardens, which are nearly surrounded by the sea. Among its many squares, the most remarkable for extent, regularity, & beauty of situation, is the Piazza di San Marco, on the S. side of the city, at the entrance of the grand canal. On the E. side of this is a smaller square called the Piazzetta, & at the angle, between these, is the church of St. Mark. Venice contains a vast number of magnificent churches & palaces, adorned with the paintings of Titian and the frescoes of Tintoretto & Paul Veronese. The chief edifices are the palace of the Procuratie Vecchie & the Procuratie Nuove, which occupy the greater part of the square of St. Mark, around which extends a vast gallery, containing elegant shops & cafés. The portion of the Procuratie Nuove next the Piazzetta is the chef-d'œuvre of Sansovino, and one of the finest buildings in existence. The old library of St. Mark occupies a magnificent hall, and in the same building is the Zecca, or mint, where, in 1284, the celebrated ducat of Venice, the most ancient coin in Europe, was struck. The former palace of the doge, built by Marino Faliero in the 14th century, is remarkable for its architecture, & its imposing mass; its interior is decorated with many of the finest works of the great masters. The bridge of sighs connects this palace with the former prisons & dungeons of the inquisition. Among the ecclesiastical edifices, the most magnificent is the church of St. Mark, with its golden ceilings, its pavement of jasper & porphyry, its 500 columns of black, white, & veined marble, bronze, alabaster, verde antique & serpentine. It contains the celebrated Palla d' Oro, a species of mosaic, in gold, silver, & enamel, made at Constantinople in the 10th century, & a vast reliquiary, with many antiquities & objects of art. Over the portal of this magnificent temple, the 4 celebrated bronze horses, which were founded at Corinth, & successively adorned Athens, Rome, Constantinople, Venice, & Paris, were replaced in 1815. In front of St. Mark, are 3 bronze pedestals, with masts, now bearing the Austrian standards, & near it are the Campanile tower, the Torre dell' Orologio, or clock tower, & 2 granite columns, one surmounted by the lion of St. Mark, & the other by the statute of St. Theodore. The other churches are S. Giorgo Majore, the Zitelle, & the church of the Saluta, with a fine cupola, the churches of the Jesuits, the Scalzi, & those of Miracoli & of St. Peter, formerly the patriarchal see, & the church of the Frari, with a fine monument to Canova; most of these, with the dogana or custom house, are situated on the grand canal. Venice has six theatres, the 7th & finest having been destroyed by fire in 1836. The arsenal, situated in an island, surrounded by high walls, was long the first in Europe, & still preserves some importance. The chief scientific & literary institutions are the lyceum, with a rich cabinet of natural history & a botanic garden, 2 royal gymnasia, & the seminary of the Saluta, occupying the former convent of this name, with valuable scientific collections, & a rich library; normal high school, marine college, academy & school of the fine arts, the oldest of its kind in existence. The library of St. Mark, comprising 90,000 vols., with a fine cabinet of antiquities & medals, is one of the richest in Italy, & among the largest in Europe. One of the most remarkable institutions in Venice, is that of the Archivio Generale, which contains an immense mass of documents relative to the history of Venice. In the middle ages, Venice had a monopoly in the manuf. of glass, but this has greatly declined, & its manufs. are now confined to mirrors, jewellery, artificial pearls, silks, & porcelain; its printing & book trade is still extensive. Imports comprise sugar, coffee, and other colonial produce, cotton & woollen fabrics, cotton yarn & raw cotton, hardware goods, dye stuffs, salted fish & grain. Exports, silk & silk goods, glass wares and books. In 1852, there were 4,218 arrivals at the port of Venice; aggregate tonnage, 391,403; departures, 3,859 vessels, aggregate tonnage, 379,690. The origin of Venice dates from the period of the invasion of Attila in 452, when a number of the inhabitants of Venetia, & other parts of Italy, taking refuge in the islands of the Adriatic, formed a confederation to oppose the barbarians. In 697 they elected, as the head of their government, a doge or duke (dux). The Venetian states formed themselves into a republic in 809. In 997 they took possession of the town of Narenta, a nest of pirates, & thus commenced their maritime power; they afterwards subjugated all the towns of Dalmatia. The crusades were a source of aggrandizement for Venice. At the end of the 12th century, the Venetians made themselves masters of part of the Morea, Corfu, Cephalonia, & Cretc. During two centuries they monopolized the commerce of India, by the route of Egypt; but they lost this on the discovery of the passage by the Cape of Good Hope. The state attained the height of its prosperity in the 15th century. It began to decline at the beginning of the 16th cent., & its overthrow was completed by the French in 1797. By the treaty of Presburg, in 1805, it was made over, with the provs. of the continent, to the kingdom of Italy, & was held by the French till 1814, when it reverted to Austria. In 1848, the Venetians revolted against the Austrians, & held the city for several months. The government of Venice comprises 8 delegs., which bear the names of their caps. Venice, Padua, Vicenza, Verona, Rovigo, Treviso, Belluno, & Udine. Pop. 1850, 2,281,732; do. of prov. 298,425.—The Gulf of Venice is formed by the Adriatic, on the N.E. coast of Italy, bounded by the Piave & Brenta.

VERONA, a fortified city of Austrian Italy, gov. Venice, cap. prov., on the Adige, here crossed by four bridges, & on r. r. from Milan to Venice, 22 m. N.N.E. Mantua. Pop. 48,000. Situated near the gorges of the Tyrol, & surrounded by the fortresses of Peschiera, Mantua, & Legnago. Verona has always been considered an important position for the defence of Upper Italy. It is enclosed by a series of turreted walls, and its fortifications have, since 1822, been much improved. From its fine situation, rich historical remains, & literary institutions, it is one of the most interesting cities in Italy. The principal public edifices are the church of St. Zeno, supposed to date from the 7th century; the cathedral, built in the 9th century; the church of St. Anastasia, remarkable for its great size & its monuments; & that of St. George for its fine paintings: two magnificent gates; the palace of the Grand Guardia, a modern edifice; the palace of consiglio, & the custom house. It has many noble private palaces. Its Roman antiquities comprise the celebrated amphitheatre, a building of imposing grandeur, the most perfect of its kind, & the only one still used for public spectacles; traces of a Roman theatre & two Roman arches. The tombs of the Scaligers, a curious monument of the Middle Ages, are a series of Gothic pyramids, surmounted by an equestrian statue of each prince. The literary institutions of Verona comprise a lyceum with fine scientific collections, episcopal seminary, the royal school for the education of ladies, 3 gymnasia, a school of painting & design, academy of agriculture, commerce & arts, a botanic garden, a philharmonic academy, 2 valuable public libraries, the museum of the lapidario, with remarkable Etruscan inscriptions. A congress was held here in 1822. It is the birth-place of Cornelius Nepos, Catullus, the elder Pliny, Paul Veronese, Bianchini, the Marquis Maffei, & many other distinguished men. Verona is renowned for its dye-works. It has manufs. of woollens & cottons; numerous silk mills moved by water power, & an extensive trade in silk & rural produce. Pop. of prov. 1850, 302,902.

VESUVIUS (MOUNT), (Ital. Vesuvio), a celebrated mntn. of S. Italy, & the only active volcano of any consequence on the continent of Europe; on the E. side of the Bay of Naples. Lat. of crater 40° 49′ N., lon. 14° 26′ E. It rises out of a fertile & luxuriant plain to the height of 3,948 feet above the sea; the diameter of the circular area occupied by it & Monte Somma being about 8 m. Its lower part is a sloping plain, covered with stones & scoriæ, 3 m. in length, & rising to 2,000 feet, above which a cone of black stones extends to 3,500 feet. It is flanked on the land-side by Monte Somma, an abrupt circular precipice. The summit of its cone is 2,000 feet in diameter, & after the eruption of 1839, had in its centre a crater 1,500 feet in diameter & 500 feet deep. Somma & Vesuvius are very different in their geological formation; the former consists of leucite porphyry, tufa, & rocks containing shells; Vesuvius is almost wholly composed of lava & scoriæ. Around it a larger number of simple minerals have been discovered than on any other area of like dimensions; & the vegetable products on its flanks comprise euphorbias & many other plants not found elsewhere in Italy. The famous wine, lagrima christi, is raised on its sides. The first recorded eruption of Mount Vesuvius occurred in the year 79, when the elder Pliny perished, & the cities Herculaneum, Pompeii, & Stabiæ, were overwhelmed & buried by lava & ashes. From that time to 1850, 49 eruptions are recorded, of which the most celebrated occurred in 472, 1779, 1794, 1819, 1834, & 1839.

VICTORIA (formerly called AUSTRALIA-FELIX and PORT-PHILIP), a British colonial territory, comprising all the part of Australia S. the rivers Murrumbigee & Murray, between lat. 34° & 39° S., & lon. 141° & 150° E., having N.E. New South Wales, W. the colony of S. Australia, & S. the Ocean & Bass's Strait, separating it from Tasmania. Area, 79,845 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 77,345, of which 46,202 were males, & 31,143 females. The territory derived its former name from the fine bay of Port Philip, near the centre of its coast line; besides which, here are the inlets Western Port, Corner inlet, Lake King, Port Fairy, & Portland Bay, most of which afford good anchorage, & are the seats of incipient towns. Surface mostly undulating or level, separated into different river basins by hill chains. In the E. the Warragong mountains, or Australian Alps, shut off the fertile & densely-wooded marit. region Gippsland from the rest of the country, & rise to an elevation of over 5,000 feet. In the W. are the Australian Pyrenees and Grampians, with many isolated heights. Principal rivers are the Murray, Hume, Hovell, N. the mountains; the streams flowing direct to the sea are all small, & nearly innavigable, but the country there is well watered, & it has many considerable salt lakes—Lake Corangamite, in the W., being 90 m. in circuit. Climate more similar to that of Great Britain than in any other part of Australia, being moist, less hot than New South Wales in the summer, & not so cold as Van Diemen's Land in winter. Temperature at Port Philip ranges from 32° to 90° in the year, & may average about 61° Fahr. Soil more fertile generally than in New South Wales, though around the borders are extensive tracts of barren land. For about 50 m. from the coast the country is almost everywhere of high fertility; there is also much good land on the banks of the Hume & Hovell; and although hitherto the corn raised has been inadequate for home consumption, & a supply has been imported from Tasmania, this colony bids fair to become a thriving agricultural region. Sheep & cattle rearing are, however, the principal occupations of the pop., & in 1851, the live stock in the province amounted to 5,000,000 sheep, 16,500 horses, & 390,000 horned cattle. In the same year, 100 acres were planted with vines, & 1,300 gallons of wine were made, chiefly near Geelong. Wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, salt from the lakes, pumice-stone, lava, & other volcanic products, abundant in the W. plains, are other chief articles of produce. Some veins of coal, & ores of copper, lead, & manganese, have been met with near the coast; but few, if any, mines are at present wrought. The exports are chiefly confined to pastoral produce—wool, sheep, cattle, hides, skins, tallow, beef, & pork, with timber, mimosa bark, & a few other articles. In 1851, its imports of British goods were to the value of 479,831*l.* & its shipments of produce, chiefly wool & tallow, to 755,326*l.* There are 12 boiling-down estab., in which 180,000 animals are annually slaughtered, producing 360,000 pounds of tallow. Principal ts. Melbourne & Geelong. The colony was formerly called "Australia Felix," & was attached to New S. Wales. It was formed into a distinct colony in 1850, under the name of the Province of Victoria, with a local government & legislature, & is now divided into 23 counties. Legislature composed of a Lt. Governor, an Executive Council, & a Legislative Council of 30 members, viz.: 20 elective & 10 nominees of the Crown. (Salary of Lt. Governor, 2,000*l.*) It was first settled by the British about 1834.

VIENNA (Ger. Wien, anc. Vindobona), a city of central Europe, cap. of the Empire of Austria, of the archduchy of Austria, & of the gov. of Lower Austria, in a fertile plain, near right or S. bank of the Danube, which here receives the small rivers Wien & Alster. Lat. (of observatory, 548 feet above the sea) 48° 12′ 36″ N., lon. 16° 23′ E. Pop. 1846, of the city proper 60,000, with suburbs, 410,945, including 14,000 military; and in 1852, 477,846. Mean temp. of year 38°.7; winter 32°.9; summer 69°.4 Fahr. The situation is unhealthy; climate very variable; fogs are frequent, & the islands & lower parts of the city are exposed to inundations. It is an archbishop's see, & the residence of the protestant superintendent for the W. provs. of the empire. It is divided into an old & a new city; the former, 3 m. in circumference, & nearly circular. In 1827 it contained only 1,229 houses, while its 34 suburbs contained 7,415. The city is surrounded by a broad fosse & a wall 40 to 50 feet high, forming the Bastei, a fashionable promenade; it is entered by twelve gates; beyond the fosse is the glacis, a public walk, extending nearly all round the city, & separating it from its suburbs. The gate called the Burgthor, is one of the finest in Europe. The city has 18 squares or places. The Hofplätz has a colossal statue of the Virgin & 2 fine fountains; the Burgplatz contains the imperial palace. Josephplatz has a statue of Joseph II.; & the Graben, a long-shaped square or street near the centre of the city, is ornamented by fountains & statues. In this & the street leading from it called the Kholmarkt, are the most fashionable shops. Among the many noble public edifices, the chief are the Burg or imperial palace, residence of the emperor, with a magnificent library & an imperial chapel & theatre; the mint, university, academy of the fine arts, observatory, imperial & city arsenal, & the custom-house. There are numerous private palaces containing valuable libraries, paintings, & other objects of art, most of which are open to the public. The cathedral of St. Stephen is a noble gothic edifice, with a tower 453 feet in elevation. The church of St. Peter is built on the model of the Basilica of St. Peter at Rome. The church of the Augustines contains the celebrated monument of the Arcduchess Christina by Canova, & a chapel in which are preserved the hearts of the princes of the imperial family, while the vaults of the church of the Capuchins contain their bodies. The educational, literary, & scientific establishments comprise the university, one of the finest in Europe, which is celebrated for its school of medicine, with a library of 120,000 vols., and a theatre of anatomy, & had, in 1842, 85 professors & 5,395 students; the school of Orientalists for training interpreters; the Theresianum, founded by Maria Theresa; the Josephine academy of medicine & surgery for the army; an academy of fine arts, with 18 professors; a noble polytechnic institute, normal school, academy of engineers, with 18 professors; a veterinary institute; a conservatory of music; 5 gymnasia, or colleges; an observatory, with a school of astronomy. The imperial library contains 300,000 vols., many thousand MSS., an immense collection of engravings, and the famous Tubula Peutingerana, a map of the Roman empire in the 4th century. The other collections are that of the paintings in the Belvidere, the lower part of which contains the Ambras collection of ancient armor & jewels, the most interesting in Europe; & the imperial cabinets of antiquities, medals, & natural history. The imperial arsenal contains 15,000 stand of arms. The principal theatres are the haf or palace theatre, the Kärntherthor, & the comic theatre. It has a deaf & dumb asylum, & numerous well-conducted charitable estabs. Vienna is the chief manuf. city of the empire; its chief manufacs. comprise silk velvets, shawls, woollens, ribbons, carpets, cottons, paper, gold & silver lace, porcelain, & musical instruments. Coach building, book and map printing, form important branches of industry. It has an imperial cannon foundry, & manufactures of small arms; its commerce is extensive, & was greatly increased by the establishment of the national bank in 1818, the navigation of the Danube by steam-boats, & the opening of railroads to the E., S., & W. In the suburbs are the cavalry barracks, the Belvidere palace, the church of St. Charles, the polytechnic institution, the theatre on the Wien, the great public hospital, containing 2,000 beds, & receiving annually 15,000 to 17,000 patients, the vast building for the imperial manuf. of porcelain, & numerous private palaces with magnificent gardens. The cap. of Austria is ornamented by many superb promenades, the chief of which is the Prater, a natural forest in an island of the Danube, laid out in long alleys, & containing deer parks, numerous coffee-houses, a panorama, & circus; on fête days it is crowded with pedestrians & the most splendid equipages. The others are the Augarten, a public park on the same island, & the Volksgarten, a beautiful public garden. The environs are very picturesque, surrounded by vineyards, & having the Kahlenberg mntns. on the W., the islands of the Danube on the N., and on the S. the Shneeberg mountain, part of the Noric Alps; they are adorned by many villas & summer palaces, among which are the imperial palace of Schönbrünn, with a magnificent botanic garden & menagerie; the pretty vill. of Maria Hitzing, with a theatre & a bath-establishment; Laxenburg, with an imperial summer palace & a spacious park. Few cities are surrounded by so many fine gardens, many of which contain the richest & rarest plants. Vindabona was a station of the Roman legions in Upper Pannonia; it was afterwards cap. of the E. provs. of the empire of Charlemagne. The King of Hungary established his court here in 1484, & it soon became the fixed residence of the house of Austria. Vienna was besieged by the Turks in 1529, & again in 1683; on the latter occasion it was relieved by the Poles under John Sobieski. The French took it in 1806 & in 1809. The congress of Vienna, which fixed the present limits of the countries of Europe, was held here from November 1814 to June 1815. The city was held by the revolutionary party for a short time in 1848; the barricades were raised on 6th October, but it surrendered to the imperial troops on 30th of same month, having suffered severely from a bombardment.

Federal representative population, 1,232,649.

Physical Features, &c.—As regards surface & soil this state may be devided into four sections. The eastern includes a tract of about 100 to 120 miles in width, & is generally low & level, & in some places marshy. It has a light sandy soil, mostly covered with pines. West of the line of the head of tide water the country becomes undulating & hilly until it attains one continuous mountain elevation known as the Blue Ridge, crossing the entire width of the state. The alluvial lands in this tract are for the most part very fertile, those of James river especially being unusually productive. The third section includes the valley between the Blue Ridge & the Alleghany Mountains. This tract, though in parts broken by mountains, is generally the most fertile & healthy part of the state. The fourth section includes the country between the Alleghany chain & the Ohio. This portion, though in many places wild & broken, has a great deal of fine fertile land, & vast deposits of coal, iron, salt, &c. Gold is found in Fluvanna & Buckingham counties & vicinity; and many valuable mineral springs exist.

There were in this state in 1850, 10,360,135 acres of land improved; & 15,792,176 unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms, $216,401,543; and the value of implements & machinery, $7,021,772. Live Stock—Horses, 272,493; asses & mules, 21,483; milch cows, 317,619; work oxen, 89,513; other cattle, 669,137; sheep, 1,310,-094; swine, 1,829,843. Rivers, &c.—The Potomac river separates Virginia from Maryland. James river is the largest which belongs to this state. It is 500 miles in length, & flows from the mountains in the interior behind the Blue Ridge, through which it passes. It is navigable for sloops 120 miles, & for boats much further, & flows into Chesapeake bay. The Appomattox is 130 m. long, & enters James river 100 miles above Hampton Roads, & is navigable 12 miles to Petersburg. The Rappahannock, 150 miles long, & navigable 110 miles for sloops, rises in the Blue Ridge, & flows into the Chesapeake. York river enters the Chesapeake, 30 miles below the Rappahannock, & is navigable 40 miles for ships. The Shenandoah enters the Potomac just before its passage through the Blue Ridge. Of the rivers west of the mountains, the Great Kanawha rises in North Carolina, passes through this state & enters the Ohio. The Little Kanawha also flows into the Ohio. The Monongahela rises in this state, though it runs chiefly in Pennsylvania. The lower part of Chesapeake bay lies wholly in this state, is 15 miles wide at its mouth, & enters the Atlantic between Cape Charles & Cape Henry.

Of the above counties, Anglesey, Carnarvon, Denbigh, Flint, Merioneth, & Montgomery, compose N. Wales; while S. Wales consists of the shires of Brecknock, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Glamorgan, Radnor, & Pembroke. Except the island Anglesey, which has a level or undulating surface, nearly all Wales, especially its N. half, is mountainous. Snowdon, in Carnarvonshire, is 3,557 ft. in height: Cader-Idris, Merionethshire, 3,550 feet; the Brecknock Beacon (S. Wales), 2,862 feet; & many summits rise to between 1,500 & 2,300 feet in elevation. Chief rivers, the Dee, Severn, Wye, Usk, Towy, Teify, Dovy, Conway, & Clwyd, the vales of some of which are very fertile. Lakes are insignificant; that of Bala, the largest, is only 8 m. in length. Principal inlets are, on the W. coast Carnarvon & Cardigan bays, St. Bride's bay, & Milford haven; on the S. Carmarthen & Swansea, separated by the peninsula of Gower, & on the N. the estuary of the Dee, & the harbors of Beaumaris & Holyhead. Principal headlands, Brach-y-Pwll & St. David's head. Agriculture is extremely backward. Barley & oats are the chief grains raised; the culture of potatoes & turnips is extending. Farms mostly small, averaging in S. Wales only from 50 to 60 acres, where, however, the tenantry are far better lodged than in the N. Large numbers of cattle are reared for the English markets. The number of sheep is estimated at 1,250,000, & the annual produce of wool at 10,000 packs. A hardy small breed of ponies is reared, especially in the cos. Montgomery & Merioneth. Mining industry is highly important. Iron, copper, lead, silver, slate, limestone, & in the S. large quantities of coal are raised, which last product is extensively exported, & used in large quantities on the spot for smelting both British & foreign ores. In 1840, South Wales had 132 furnaces in operation, consuming annually about 1,436,000 tons of coal, & producing 505,000 tons of iron; & N. Wales 12 furnaces, consuming 110,000 tons of coal, & producing 26,500 tons of iron. The principal iron works are at & around Merthyr-Tydvil, Tredegar, Aberdare, & Rhuabon; at Swansea, large quantities of American & other copper ores are reduced. Manufs. of woollen fabrics, especially of flannel & hosiery, are very generally pursued in the cottages of the peasantry, particularly in N. Wales, where Welshpool is the chief mart for these products. The cotton manuf. has extended into some of the N. cos.; & in 1847, 1,860 hands were employed in woollen, cotton, flax, & silk factories. A manuf. of slate articles exists at Bangor. Trade principally in the export of mineral produce, cattle, & woollen goods. WARSAW (Pol. Warszawa, Germ. Warschau, Fren. Varsovie), cap. of the kingdom Poland, & on lt. b. of the Vistula, across which it communicates by a bridge of boats with its fortified suburb Praga. Lat. of observatory, 52° 13′ 5″ N., lon. 21° 2′ 9″ E. Pop. 154,-

078, of whom 35,000 are Jews. Mean temp. of year, 44° .1; winter, 24° .9; summer, 68° .2 Fahr. The city, surrounded by ramparts and trenches, and several suburbs, has a fine appearance from the N. & E., but internally it presents striking contrasts of magnificence & misery, its streets being ill-paved & lighted, & its stone buildings interspersed with hovels of timber. Principal edifices, the Zomek, a vast palace of the former kings of Poland, now an imperial residence, & containing the hall of the Polish diet, & archives of the kingdom; the Saxon palace, having attached to it fine gardens open to the public; the government palace, containing the national theatre, custom-house, high tribunals, & gov. offices, & also having attached to it gardens, which are a fashionable place of resort; the Casimir palace, with a statue of Copernicus; modern palace of the minister of finance, new exchange, Brühl & Radzivil palaces; many colossal churches, including the Roman Catholic cathedral of St. John, church of the Holy Cross, Augustine, & Alexander churches, the church of St. Borromeo, a Lutheran church, and the citadel. The Marieville bazaar is a large square, surrounded by arcades. Warsaw has a Greek-united cathedral, Armenian & English Chapels, many synagogues, 6 hospitals, 5 theatres, barracks, a mint, school of artillery, 2 colleges replacing its university (suppressed in 1834, & its library of 150,000 vols., removed to St. Petersburg), a theological seminary, rabinical college, observatory, botanic garden, musical conservatory, 2 gymnasia, school of arts, numerous Russian schools, libraries, & learned associations. Its public places abound with statues; the principal of these are the bronze statue of Sigismund III., & the equestrian group of Poniatowski. It is furnished with some of the finest promenades of any European city, & in the immediate vicinity is a villa, formerly the residence of Stanislaus Augustus, containing fine paintings, & surrounded by public grounds, in which is an equestrian statue of John Sobieski. Warsaw has manufs. of woollen & linen fabrics, hosiery, hats, gold and silver wares, saddlery, paper, & tobacco, chemical & cotton-printing works, numerous breweries, &c. It is the centre of industry, commerce, & literary activity of the kingdom, & the great entrepôt of commerce in Poland; it is the seat of the national bank, & has large fairs in May and September, frequented by merchants of both Europe & Asia. It communicates by railroad S.W. past Czenstochau with Cracow & the Austrian lines of railroad. Warsaw succeeded Cracow as the cap. of Poland, in 1566. In 1807, it was made capital of the grand duchy of Warsaw. Since 1815, it has been the cap. of the kingdom of Poland, a dependency of Russia. In 1830 the Russians were driven from it by the Poles, but they retook it in 1831. [POLAND.]

WASHINGTON, the capital of the United States of America, is situated on the left bank of the Potomac, at its confluence with the Anacostia, & at the termination of the Washington branch of the Baltimore and Ohio r. r. Lat. of the National Observatory, 38° 53′ 39″·3 N., lon. 77° 0g′ 48″ W. from Greenwich, Engl. It is 295 miles from the ocean by the course of the river, 38 from Baltimore, & 225 from New York. The population in 1800, was 3,210; in 1810, 8,208; in 1820, 13,247; in 1830, 18,827; in 1840, 23,364; in 1850, 45,001, & in 1854, 46,000. The city is encompassed by a fine range of hills, & covered in part with trees & shrubbery, presenting verdant & cultivated slopes. The ground on which it is built has a general elevation of about forty feet above the river. In planning the city, the most advantageous ground was appropriated for the different edifices, & for several squares commanding extensive prospects, & susceptible of such improvements as use or ornament might require. Avenues of direct communication have been made, connecting distant objects with the principal ones. North & south lines, crossed by others running east & west, divide the city into streets & squares. The avenues are named after the respective states, & the Capitol is the point from which the streets are named,—those north being called A North, &c., & those south, A South, &c.: those east & west, 1st East, &c., & 1st West, &c., respectively. The avenues are from 120 to 160 feet wide: Pennsylvania avenue, leading from the Capitol to the President's house, has a sidewalk twenty-six feet wide, paved, & planted with trees, the carriage-way being macadamized.

The Capitol is a large and massy building of the Corinthian order of architecture, & is built of freestone. It is situated in the centre of the square, on an eminence 78 feet above the tide, & is composed of a central edifice with two wings, with a projection on the west side. The length of the front is 352 feet, including the wings; the depth of the wings is 121 feet. The projection on the east or main front, including the steps, is 65 feet wide, & another on the west front 83 feet wide. On the east front there is a splendid portico of 22 columns 38 feet high; & on the west front there is a portico of ten columns. The extensions of the capital, now in course of construction, are 2 wings, 140 feet by 238 feet, surrounded on 3 sides by colonnades communicating by corridors 50 feet wide & 44 in length, with the main building; the whole, when completed, will cover an area of about 4 acres. The height of the building to the top of the dome is 120 feet. Under the dome, in the middle of the building, is the Rotunda, 95 feet in diameter, & of the same height, & adorned with sculpture, in stone panels in bold relief: the subjects of these are—Smith delivered by the interposition of Pocahontas—the Landing of the Pilgrims—the conflict of Boone with the Indians—& Penn treating with the Indians; & the four celebrated paintings by Trumbull, representing the presentation of the Declaration of Independence to Congress—the surrender of Burgoyne to Gates—the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown—and Washington resigning his commission to Congress at Annapolis; also the baptism of Pocahontas, by Chapman; the embarkation of the Pilgrims, by Weir, & the landing of Columbus, by Vanderlyn. The east front has also, in two niches, colossal figures in marble, of Peace & of War, & a fine marble statue of Columbus, by Persico, has just been added to this entrance. The colossal statue of Washington, by Greenough, has been placed in the East Park, in a neat temple erected for the purpose. To the west of the Rotunda is the library room of Congress, 92 by 34 feet, & 36 feet in height, containing 50,000 vols. In the second story of the south wing is the Hall of the House of Representatives, of a semicircular form, 96 feet long and 60 feet high, with a dome supported by 24 columns of native variegated marble, & with capitals of Italian marble. This room is ornamented by some fine statuary & paintings. The Senate Chamber is in the second story of the north wing, & is semicircular, like that of the Representatives, but smaller, being 78 feet long & 45 feet high. Below the Senate Chamber, and nearly of the same form & dimensions, though much less elegant, is the room of the Supreme Court of the United States; & there are in the building 70 rooms for the accommodation of committees & officers of Congress.

Around the Capitol are 22 acres of park, highly ornamented with trees of many varieties, shrubbery, fountains, &c.

The Presidents House is an elegant edifice of freestone, two stories high, at the intersection of Pennsylvania, Virginia, New York, Connecticut, and Vermont avenues, & stands near the centre of a park of 20 acres, at an elevation of 44 feet above the river. The front entrance faces north upon La Fayette Square, & the southern front, towards the garden, presents a fine view of the city, of the Potomac river, & the shores of Maryland & Virginia. The building is 170 feet front & 86 feet deep. The north front is ornamented with a fine Ionic portico of four lofty columns, projecting with three columns. The outer intercolumniation is for carriages to drive into, to place the company under shelter. The middle space is the entrance for visitors who come on foot: the steps from both lead to a broad platform in front of the door of entrance. The interior is elegantly constructed & richly furnished.

The State Department, which stands N.E. of the President's house & within the same inclosure, is a plain brick building, 2 stories high, 160 feet long, & 55 wide, with a broad passage on both floors, & containing in all 32 rooms. It contains a valuable library of some 15,000 volumes. In addition to this collection, the Copyright Bureau contains some 10 or 12,000 vols. published in this country, kept as part & parcel of the archives of the government.

The Treasury Department stands at the eastern extremity of the square, is a stone edifice, 340 feet long, & 170 wide, but when the northern & southern wings are added, it will be 457 feet in length, & has a colonnade, stretching the entire length of the building. It has 3 floors upon which business is transacted, on each end of which are nearly fifty apartments. A good legal library is attached to this department. The United States attorney-general has his office in this building.

The War Department building occupies the N.W. corner of the square, & is similar in design to the State Department. It is the head-quarters of all the officers of the army. The department comprises the War Office proper, the Quartermaster's Department, the Engineer's Department, Bureau of Topographical Engineers, Ordnance Office, Subsistence Department, Pay Department, Medical Department, Office of Adjutant-General, & the head-quarters of the Commander-in-chief of the Army. The Department is furnished with a library of 10,000 volumes.

The Navy Department building lies directly W. of the President's house, & in the rear of the War Department. It has 5 bureaus, exclusive of the Secretary's office, viz.,—Bureau of the Navy Yards and Docks, Bureau of Construction, Equipment, and Repair; Bureau of Provisions & Clothing, Bureau of Ordnance & Hydrography, & Bureau of Medicine & Surgery.

The Department of the Interior, or Home Department, is the most extensive connected with the government. The building is yet unfinished. A portion of it is already occupied by one of the bureaus of the department, the Patent Office, & also by the Museum of the National Institute. The titles of the bureaus connected with the Interior Department are as follows:—Land Office, Patent Office, Indian Office, and Pension Office. This department pertains exclusively with all those matters bearing upon the internal economy of the U. States, & is, of course, increasing in importance with every successive year. It has a library of some 5,000 volumes. In the second story of the building now occupied by the Patent Office are the original Declaration of Independence, the invaluable relics of Washington, including his camp chest, the gifts presented from time to time to the government by foreign powers, Franklin's printing press, a collection of Indian portraits by King, the treasures of the National Institute, interesting memorials of the late James Smithson, and the extensive & rare treasures secured by the U. States Exploring Expedition. It is open to the inspection of the public, & the hall is one of the most interesting for the stranger to visit to be found in the metropolis. In the first story of the same building are collected all the models of the machines which have been patented since the foundation of the government.

The Post-Office Department was designed & built by Mr. Mills, of white marble & after the Corinthian order. It is 3 stories high, & 204 feet long, & 102 deep; it contains 27 rooms on each floor, making 81 in all. It occupies a central position in the city, near the Department of the Interior, both of which are about half a mile from the President's house.

The National Observatory is situated on the N. bank of the Potomac, in an oblique direction from the President's house, towards Georgetown. The site is a beautiful one, commanding a fine view of Washington & Georgetown, of the Potomac river, & surrounding country. It is a naval institution, under the control & management of Lieutenant M. F. Maury, U. S. N. The force employed at it consists principally of naval officers. Besides the astronomical duties of the establishment, here are kept all the nautical books, charts, & instruments belonging to the navy. The apartment in which the chronometers are kept is a very interesting one. Before one of these instruments is purchased by government, it is required to be put on trial by the Superintendent of the Observatory for one year; during which period it is compared daily with the great astronomical clock of the Observatory. The temperature of the room is also carefully observed, & recorded every day, & in case the instrument fails to come up to the test required, it is returned to the maker at the end of the year. There are from 60 to 100 chronometers always in this room, all of which are daily compared. Thus a complete & minute history is kept of each one. Here also are conducted the celebrated researches connected with the "Wind & Current Charts;" the deep sea soundings, tides, & the various oceanic phenomena. The large telescope, called the Equatorial, is a 14 feet refractor, with an object-glass of 9 inches. It is mounted in the revolving dome on the top of the main building; & is so arranged with clock-work & machinery, that being directed to a star in the morning, it may be left, when on returning to it in the evening, it will have followed the path of the star so exactly, that it will be found still pointing to the star. With its powers the stars are visible at midday. In a room below are the Meridian & Mural Circles; in another, the Transit instrument; in another, the Prime Vertical instrument; & in another, the Great Refraction Circle, invented by the superintendent. But the most wonderful object is the Electro-Chronograph, invented by Dr. Locke, of Cincinnati. It is in the room with the Transit instrument, & is so arranged, by its connection with an electrical battery in the building, that its beats may be heard wherever the magnetic wires lead, if connected with it. Thus it may be made to record the time, so that the astronomer in Boston, New-Orleans, or elsewhere, will know the time at Washington, & by comparison with his own clock, the exact distance in time is recorded. The Observatory regulates the time for Washington and Georgetown by the falling of a ball precisely at 12 or meridian.

The Arsenal occupies a fine position at Greenleaf's Point, on the extreme southern point of the city, at the junction of the Eastern Branch with the Potomac, & commands an extensive view. The channels of both rivers running near the Arsenal shore, afford all requisite facilities for receiving & shipping ordnance and other military stores. The buildings occupy nearly the whole reservation, & form one of the princip. arsenals of construction in the U. S. The work-shops contain much useful and ingenious machinery, propelled by steam, for manuf. gun-carriages & equipments for artillery, & for preparing ammunition of all kinds. In the spacious storehouses of the Arsenal are to be seen arms & equipments for the troops; also a large number of gun-carriages & other apparatus for the service of the artillery in the forts & in the field, from the ponderous Columbiad for the defence of the coast, to the little mountain howitzer, which may be transported, with its miniature smith's forge, on the back of a mule. The Model Office contains a collection of models or patterns of the various arms and military equipments used in our service, & also of such of those used in the armies of other nations as have been obtained by the ordnance department. Here may also be seen some specimens of old & new inventions, repeating arms, revolvers, &c., which have been suggested at home or abroad, by the organ of destructiveness. In front of the old Arsenal square a small collection of foreign brass cannon will attract the notice of the visitor, who will perceive by the inscriptions that some of them are trophies of the success of our arms at Saratoga, Yorktown, Niagara, & Vera Cruz.

The Navy Yard is situated on the "Anacostia," a branch of the Potomac r., at the southern termination of Eighth street, east. It covers an area of about 20 acres, & is enclosed by a substantial brick wall, having a principal entrance at the foot of Eighth street, through a handsome arched gateway. The mechanical operations of this establishment are various & extensive, & the skill of the workmen and the excellence of the materials employed have been satisfactorily tested in every sea. Anchors of all sizes, for the naval service, are manufac. by the use of two heavy steam hammers, (termed the "Nasmyth hammer," one of which weighs 3,600 pounds, the other 2,240 pounds. The forges for this work are kept in blast by a fan-blower attached to the steam engine in the machinist's department. There is also in operation, in the anchor department, a direct action steam hammer (called the "Kirk Hammer,"), in connection with a blast furnace for working up into bolts & bars all the scrap iron of the navy. The massive chain-cables are made in another shop, which is provided with a powerful hydrostatic press for testing their strength. Another department is engaged in the manufacture of galleys, caboozes, and copper powder tanks, and of the various kinds of brass work appertaining to ships of war. The different machines employed in making these articles are driven by a steam-engine of about 15 horse power. A large and extensive iron foundry has recently been erected, of sufficient capacity & with the necessary facilities for moulding and casting the heaviest work; connected with this foundry are the machines for boring, turning, and planing the steam cylinders and other machinery required for the naval service. Adjoining the iron foundry are the ordnance and boiler-making departments, which are provided with a steam-engine of about 12 horse-power. The ordnance depart. is engaged in the fabrication of light brass ordnance, howitzers for boat and land service, of shot & shells, percussion caps, musket & pistol balls, &c. Some of this machinery is very ingenious & highly interesting. Close by this range of buildings is a very extensive machine shop, in which are placed all the tools required in the manufacture of steam engines & machinery of every description. Attached to this shop is an engine of 40 horse-power, which also gives motion to the block-making machinery, & to the fan-blowers of the anchor-making department. On the western side of the Yard is the pyrotechnical laboratory, in which are prepared all the articles for the navy appropriate to this department. There are two large ship-houses for building ships, under one of which is about to be constructed a marine railway for hauling up steamers for repair. The grounds are beautifully laid out; shaded with trees; the whole neatly enclosed & preserved in handsome order.

The Smithsonian Institution was founded on a bequest of more than half a million of dollars made to the United States by James Smithson, an Englishman. The object of the bequest, according to his will, was "to found at Washington, under the name of the Smithsonian Institution, an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." On the 1st of July, 1836, Congress accepted this important trust, & the money was paid into the Treasury of the United States in 1838. The Act of Congress establishing the Institution, was passed in 1846. The Institution is situated on the Mall, below the Capitol: it presents a noble appearance, and is one of the great attractions of the metropolis. The style of the architecture is the Romanesque, the material a reddish freestone of fine grain; its extreme length is 450 feet, its width 140 feet, & it has 9 towers, varying in height from 75 to 150 feet. The grounds which surround it are very extensive and tastefully laid out. The beneficial influence of this important establishment has already been felt: it has already printed & circulated a number of valuable volumes, acquired collections in the way of natural history, and scientific as well as general literature, which are valuable & interesting, & engaged distinguished men to deliver lectures. The great library room is capable of holding 100,000 vols. The building is supplied with a lecture room, which will seat 1,200 persons; its museum and rooms for chemical experiments are spacious & convenient: and in the western wing is a gallery of art.

The Washington Monument is not yet finished. It stands on the Mall, between the President's house and the Potomac, & embraces the idea of a grand circular colonnaded building 250 feet in diameter, 100 ft. high, from which springs an obelisk shaft 70 feet in diameter at the base, & 500 feet high, making a total elevation of 600 feet.

The National Medical College, instituted in 1825, is now in successful operation. It was, until a few years past, known as the Medical Department of the Columbian College, from which institution it derives its authority to confer degrees, under an act of incorporation from the Congress of the United States. The edifice is conveniently situated in a central part of the city—equidistant from the Capitol & President's house. The requisites for graduating are, that the candidate shall have attended the lectures of each Professor two full courses, or one full course in this school, & one full course in some other respectable institution. He must have a fair moral character, & he shall have dissected during at least one session. He shall have entered his name with the Dean of the Faculty as a candidate for graduation, & delivered to him an Inaugural Dissertation upon some medical subject, thirty days before the close of the session, and pass a satisfactory examination.

The Columbian College, which was incorporated in 1821, is beautifully situated on an eminence, adjoining the City Corporation, on the north, & on Fourteenth-street west. It is a fine brick edifice, four stories high, & overlooks the city, the capitol, & other public buildings; and commands a fine view of the Potomac, with the surrounding country, for many miles in extent. The College has a good library, a valuable philosophical apparatus, and other means and facilities for pursuing a thorough and liberal course of studies. It has a President, & twelve Professors & teachers—including those of the National Medical College, which is under the same corporation—one hundred students, & between two & three hundred alumni.

The Coast Survey Office Buildings, occupied for the use of the United States Coast Survey, are situated on the west side of New-Jersey avenue, about a sixth of a mile from the Capitol. They consist of four old houses, in a block, presenting a decidedly rusty exterior, & in no way looking like public buildings.

The City Hall was finished in 1850. It is a large & handsome edifice, and occupies a commanding position on Judiciary square, is 200 feet in length. The Circuit & Criminal Courts hold their sessions in this hall; also the members of the City Councils.

The Public Schools of Washington are quite numerous: of free public schools there are four, with quite a large number of primary schools. Select schools & seminaries for the education of both sexes, also exist in different parts of the city, several of them of a high & established character. There are also several excellent boarding-schools in Washington, and two or three in Georgetown.

The National Institute was founded in 1840, and has for its object the promotion of science in all departments. It holds its meetings at the Patent Office. It has a miscellaneous library of nearly 4,000 volumes, pamphlets, maps, and charts, with a few interesting manuscripts, & in the cabinet are many medals and coins. The library is always open to the inspection of the public.

Washington is well supplied with Churches, numbering about 25, belonging to the Baptist, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, Universalists, &c., and, considering its extent, is quite as well supplied with eloquent preachers as any city in the Union. Hotels are quite numer., but not sufficiently so, even now, to accommodate the public. The names of the principal ones are the National Hotel, Brown's Hotel, Willard's Hotel, Gadsby's Hotel, the Irving Hotel, the United States Hotel, the Potomac Hotel, & Tyler's Hotel. From the doors of each, the stranger may at almost any moment step into a convenient & elegant omnibus, and go to almost any part of the city he may desire.

The Congressional Cemetery, a mile east of the Capitol, is handsomely laid out, & contains many sculptured tombs, monuments, &c. It is tastefully adorned with trees & shrubbery.

The seat of the Federal government was removed to Washington city in 1800. The north wing of the Capitol was commenced September 16th, 1793; the President, George Washington, laid the corner-stone; the architect was Pierre C. L'Enfant.

WASHINGTON, a territory of U. States of Amer., lies between lat. 45° 25′ N., long. 105° 30′ & 124° 30′ W. Area, 113,821 sq. m. It is between the Rocky mountains on the E., & the Pacific Ocean on the W., has Oregon on its south border, & the British Possessions on the N. The entire population in 1850 was 1,201; in 1854, estimated at 5,000. It is divided into 6 counties, viz., Clark, Lewis, Pacific, Pierce, Stevens, Thurston. The country west of the Cascade Range is the only portion yet settled by a white population; it has a diversified surface, & the valleys bordering the streams have a luxuriant soil. The streams are small, the Cowlitz and other small streams entering the Columbia river on the south, the Chickeeles entering Gray's harbor on the W., & a number of other streams entering Puget sound on the N.W. Puget sound, Hoods canal, & Admiralty inlet, abound with fine harbors. The Cascade range crosses the territory from the south (at the Cascades on the Columbia river) entirely across it to the north, rising in several peaks above the snow line, as Mount St. Helens (an active volcano), Mount Rainier, Mount Boker, &c. East of this range little is known of the capabilities of the country as an agricultural region, although there is no doubt of its being well adapted for stock raising. It is drained by the constituents of the Columbia, consisting of Kooskoosky & Peloose rivers of the Lewis fork, & Spokane, Okonagan, Barrier & Yakima rivers of Clark's fork, and Cathalacades entering the Columbia river.

The strait of Juan de Fuca, including the waters of Admiralty inlet, Hood canal, & Puget sound, with the archipelago of Arro up to the 49th parallel, were all surveyed by the United States Exploring Expedition. The whole is unsurpassed by any estuary in the world. They comprise many very fine harbors & safe anchorages, are entirely free from dangers, & cover an area of about 2,000 square miles. The country by which these waters are surrounded is remarkably salubrious, and offers every advantage for the accommodations of a vast commercial & military marine, with conveniences for docks & many sites for towns & cities, at all times well supplied with water, & capable of being provided with all needful supplies from the surrounding country, which is well adapted for agriculture. This strait is 95 miles in length; average width 11 miles (entrance 8 m. in width); no dangers exist, & it may be safely navigated throughout.

Neah, or Scarborough Harbor, on the south side of the strait, just within Cape Flattery, is but a small indentation in the coast, which is partly sheltered on the N. E. by Neah Island. This is the position where the Spaniards attempted to establish themselves in 1792, & the remains of the old fort are still in existence. It offers a tolerably safe & convenient anchorage, though exposed to north-west gales. New Dungeness is a safe roadstead, and lies eighty miles from Cape Flattery, E. by S. true, the trend of the strait being E. by S., & W. by N. nearly. The point of New Dungeness is well adapted for the position of a light-house; it projects into the strait, & would be seen a long distance both up & down. The water close to the point is deep; a vessel may approach to within a quarter of a mile, and after turning it, safe and secure anchorage may be had in from ten to fifteen fathoms of water. It is extensive enough to accommodate a very large fleet. Budd Harbor lies adjoining it, & is connected with the roadstead of New Dungeness by a narrow channel, which has a depth of 2½ fathoms, & may be easily deepened if necessary. It is a fine & very capacious harbor, being 4 miles long, & 1½ wide, & perfectly secure at all times for repairs.

Port Discovery, 7 miles to the S.E. of New Dungeness, is very easy of access, & well protected by high precipitous banks; the anchorage is close to the shore in 27 fathoms of water. The name of Port Discovery was given by Vancouver. It is 7 miles long, 1½ average breadth, & its points, which terminate in low sandy projections, interlock each other. Protection Island covers it completely to the north, & would render it easily defensible against a formidable attack. Port Townsend, at the entrance of Admiralty inlet, is a fine sheet of water, 3¾ m. long, & 1¾ in width. This bay is free from dangers, & is well protected in the direction from which stormy winds blow. It has anchorage of a convenient depth, & there is abundance of fresh water to be had; the best anchorage is on the north side. The soil in this place is a light sandy loam, very productive. Port Lawrence is just at the junction of Admiralty Inlet & Hood canal; it is a convenient anchorage, & is separated from one of the arms of Port Townsend by a narrow strip of land. Passing the entrance to Hood canal, and up Admiralty inlet, there are several anchorages where a vessel may await tide in beating up; such as Pilot & Apple-Tree cove. Port Madison is a fine harbor, & affords every possible convenience for shipping. It is on the west side of the inlet, & communicates on the south by a ship channel with Port Orchard, which is one of the most extensive & beautiful of the many fine harbors on these inland waters, & is perfectly protected from the winds. The only danger is a reef of rocks nearly in the middle of the entrance from Admiralty Inlet. It includes 3 arms, the most northern of which, though entered by a narrow channel, is from ¼ to 1½ mile in width, and extends for a distance of 6 miles. The shores are covered with a large growth of trees, with here & there a small prairie. The soil is superior to that of most places around the sound, & is capable of yielding almost any production of the temperate zone. Vashon Island lies in Admiralty inlet, above Port Orchard, & has a ship channel on both sides of it. Commencement bay lies at the bottom of Admiralty inlet, on the east channel. It affords good temporary anchorage, & a supply of wood & water can be obtained. There is a small stream emptying into it, called by the Indians Puyallup. The Narrows, which connect Admiralty inlet with Puget sound, are 1 m. wide, & 4½ long. The tide here runs with great velocity, causing many whirlpools & eddies, through which a ship is carried with great rapidity, the danger appearing to be imminent. The banks rise nearly perpendicular, & are composed of sand stone. Point Defiance, on the E., commands all the approaches to it. Puget Sound is a collection of inlets, covering an area of 15 sq. m., the only entrance to which is through the Narrows, which, if strongly fortified, would be almost impregnable. The inlets, in the order in which they come from the entrance, have received the names of Carr, Case, Hammersley, Totten, Eld, Budd, and Henderson. They are united by passages, which form several islands and peninsulas. All these inlets are safe and commodious, and capacious harbors well supplied with water, and the land around them fertile. Nine miles from the Narrows is Nisqually. Here the anchorage is very much contracted, in consequence of the rapid shelving of the bank, that soon drops off into deep water. The shore rises abruptly to a height of 200 feet, & on the top of the ascent is an extended plain on which Fort Nisqually is built. Case Inlet extends to within two miles of the waters of Hood canal. Hood Canal extends for a distance of 40 miles in a south-west direction, and then turns to the north-east for 10 miles, approaching the waters of Puget sound, with an average width of 2 miles. It contains several good harbors, viz., Port Ludlow, Port Gamble, Suquamish, and Scabock Harbor and Dabop Bay. On the east side of Admiralty inlet, as well as at the head of De Fuca strait, and the waters within the Gulf de Arro as far as Point Roberts, in lat. 49° N., there are many fine harbors & bays, formed by the islands and projecting headlands, viz., Commencement Bay, Elliot Bay, [Port Gardner, Port Susan, Holmes Harbor, Penn Cove,] Hornet Harbor, Strawberry Bay, Billingham, & Birch Bays. Those within the brackets lie within Whidby Island. The Naval Archipelago, between the Canal de Arro & Ringgold Channel, offers many fine anchorages. The Gulf of Georgia and Johnson strait are not well adapted for navigation, in consequence of the rapidity of the tides, and the many sunken rocks at the northern outlet. The harbors within them, both on the main land & Vancouver Island, are useless on account of the great depth of water and the perpendicular banks. Not a shoal exists within the Strait of Juan de Fuca, Admiralty inlet, Puget sound, or Hood canal that can in any way interrupt their navigation by a seventy-four gun ship. The shores of all the inlets & bays are remarkably bold, so much so, that in many places a ships side would strike the shore before the keel would touch the ground. Some few of them have creeks emptying into them, with water sufficient to turn mills. These creeks have all extensive mud-flats at their entrances, with fertile prairies at their heads and along their banks. The spring tides rise 18 feet; those of the neap 12 feet, affording every facility for the construction of dry docks, &c. The country on all these salt water inlets is said to be remarkably healthy. The winter is represented to be mild, & but of short duration, and the channels & harbors are never obstructed by ice.

The climate is said to be unusually mild & even in temperature for so high a north latitude. The country near Puget sound, abounds with fine timber, and its waters with excellent fish.

Olympia is the capital, situated on Budd's inlet, at the head of Puget sound. Other principal settlements are Cowlitz, Pacific City, Nisqually, &c.

The Government consists of a Governor, a Council, & House of Representatives. The governor is appointed by the President of the United States for the term of four years; the legislative assembly is elected by the people. Every white male inhabitant 21 years of age and a citizen of the United States, is a qualified elector.

This territory was separted from Oregon in 1853, & constituted a separate territory.

WEST INDIES, Antillia or Antilles, an archipelago of islands which extend from the Gulf of Florida to the Gulf of Paria, & form part of the division Central America; between lat. 10° & 28° N., & lon. 59° and 85° W., bounded on N. & E. by the Atlantic, and on the S. by the Caribbean Sea, which separates them from the N. coast of S. America. The N.W. group contains the largest islands, or Greater Antilles, as Cuba, St. Domingo, Jamaica, and Porto-Rico. The other group, or Lesser Antilles, stretching from N. to S., consists of Guadaloupe, Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad, &c. The Bahamas form a third group.

The Lesser Antilles, from Porto-Rico to the Gulf of Paria, are by some writers called the Windward isls., & the smaller group along the coast of Venezuela, the Leeward islands; but in British charts the Windward islands comprise those between lat. 10° & 15° N., the Leeward those between lat. 15° & 19° N.

Leeward Isls.		Windward Isls.

Total area of the archipelago is 95,100 sq. m. Pop. 3,684,000. [America.] The Lesser Antilles are of volcanic origin. Climate of the whole tropical, but modified by the surrounding ocean & the elevated land of many of the islands. Sugar, coffee, cotton, dye-woods, & spices, are the chief products & exports. Of these islands, France possesses Guadaloupe, Martinique, Desenda, Marie-Galante, & part of St. Martin; to Spain belongs Cuba & Porto-Rico; to Denmark, Santa Cruz, St. Thomas, & St. John; to Holland, St. Eustatius, Saba, Curaçoa, and part of St. Martin; to Sweden, St. Bartholomew; Hayti is governed by rulers chosen from the citizens of each of its two governments; Margarita & adjacent isles belong to the repub. of Venezuela; & Anguilla, Antigua, Barbados, Dominica, Grenada, Jamaica, Montserrat, Nevis, St. Christopher, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Tobago, Tortola, Trinidad, Bahamas, & Bermudas, belong to Great Britain. Columbus landed on St. Salvador, Bahama group, in October, 1492; & the archipelago, under the erroneous impression, at the time of discovery, that it formed part of Asia, was called the West Indies. (See America, Central.) [Particular descriptions are given under the heads of the various islands.]

WEST POINT, p-v., Cornwall t., Orange county, N. Y., 92 S. by W. Albany, 52 m. N. New York city, 278 W. Lat. 41° 23′ 31″ N., lon. 73° 57′ 31″ W. from Greenwich, England. Picturesquely situated on the right bank of the Hudson river, among the richest river and mountain scenery conceivable. It is associated with some of the most stirring events of the war of the revolution, and is now the seat of the National Military Academy. The academy was established here by an act of Congress in 1802. The buildings are two stone barracks, one 3 and the other 4 stories high, occupied by 250 cadets, the limited number; a large 3 story stone buildiag, 275 by 75 feet, for military exercises in winter, and as a depository of the chemical apparatus, models of fortification, &c., & as drawing & recitation rooms; a fine 2 story stone building, of Gothic architecture, 150 by 60 feet, with 3 towers for astronomical apparatus, the middle tower revolving for an astronomical observatory, a chapel, hospital, mess hall, 2 cavalry stables, several workshops & store-rooms, & separate dwellings for the officers of the institution. There are also a magazine, a laboratory, soldiers' barracks, a store, & dwellings for families connected with the establishment, & a total population of 1,200. Here is a convenient landing, & a large hotel, capable of accommodating 100 visitors. This place was fortified during the revolutionary war, and the remains of Fort Putnam, on Mount Independence, elevated 500 feet above the level of the river, and of Fort Clinton, are still seen. The education given at West Point, both scientific & military, is of a high order, & 24 officers & professors are attached to the institution. About the grounds are several monuments; that erected to Kosciusko by the cadets, is the most beautiful. Opposite West Point is Constitution island, on which are the ruins of the fort erected during the revolution; a massy chain was extended from this isl. to West Point to prevent the passage of vessels. The academy was first erected on the land owned by the state of New York, but was ceded to the national government in 1826.

WHITE, r., Vt., rises in Hancock t., Addison co., and receives 3 large branches from the N., called the First, Second, and Third branches, in Bethel & Royalton. The Second branch has its source in Williamstown, in the same swamp with Stevens' branch of Winooski r. Each of these branches affords water power. White r. is about 55 m. long, & flows into Connecticut r. in Hartford t. It is the largest r. in Vt. on the E. side of the Green mts.

WHITE, r., Ia., is composed of the East and West forks. The first rises in Johnson co., receives numerous tributaries, & can be made navigable 75 m. above the confluence of the branches. The West fork rises in Randolph co., receives numerous branches, & is navigable for steamboats in high water as far as Indianapolis, and for flat-boats much further. The branches unite between Daviess & Knox co's., & flowing about 30 m. W.S.W. enter the Wabash r. The lower part of the r. is 200 yards wide, & is navigable for ordinary steamboats at the usual stages of water, in the spring season.

WHITE, r., Ark., rises in a ridge called the Black mountains, & running a considerable distance in Mo., enters Ark., & receives Big Black r. from the N., between Independence & Jackson counties. Thence flowing S. & S.S.E. it receives on the W. Little Red r., & on the E. Cache r., & enters the Mississippi r. 14 m. above the entrance of Arkansas r. About 7 m. from its mouth it is connected, through an inundated forest, by a bayou as wide as the river with Arkansas r., 30 m. above its mouth, which, in moderate stages of the water, is boatable. White r. has a very winding course, & is said to be boatable for 1,000 m., though its length in a direct course is not over 500 m. The country through which it flows is extensively a fertile agricultural & a rich mineral region. Near its entrance into the Mississippi, its course is through a deep swamp, much of which has been reclaimed by the erection of levees along the banks of the river to prevent the overflow.

WHITE MOUNTAIN, p. o., Coos co., N. H.

WHITE MOUNTAINS, N. H. Situated in Coos co., toward the N.E. part of the state. In their more elevated parts, the range extends in a direction of N. W. & S.E. for 20 miles, with a breadth of 8 or 10 m. They lie 30 miles N. of Winnipiseogee lake, & 70 N. Concord. Until recently they were regarded as the highest land in the United States E. of the Rocky mountains, but it has been ascertained that there are higher peaks in North Carolina. The 3 highest peaks of each, above the level of the sea, are as follows:

White Mountains, N. H.		Mountains in Yancey co., N. C.
Mount Washington	6,234 feet.	Black Mountain	6,476 feet.
" Adams	5,328 "	Roane	6,038 "
" Jefferson	5,058 "	Grandfather Mntn	5,556 "

Madison peak, of the White Mountains, is 4,866 feet; Monroe, 4,711 feet; Franklin, 4,356 ft.; Lafayette, 4,339 feet high. Mount Washington is frequently visited by travellers, who commonly ascend by the S.E. side, commencing at the town of Conway, & following the course of the Saco river, which rises high in the mntn. After climbing up the side of the mountain for a considerable distance, the trees begin to diminish in height, till at the elevation of about 4,000 feet you come to a region of dwarfish evergreens, about the height of a man's head, putting forth numerous horizontal branches, closely interwoven with each other, and surrounding the mountain with a formidable hedge. On emerging from this thicket, you are above all woods, at the foot of what is called the bald part of the mountain, which consists of a huge pile of naked rocks. After attaining the summit, the traveller is recompensed for his toil, if the sky be clear, with a most grand and extensive prospect, embracing the Atlantic ocean at Portland, 65 m. in a direct line to the S.E.; the Katahdin Mountains to the N.E., near the sources of Penobscot r.; on the W. to the Green Mountains in Vt.; & Monadnock Mountain, 120 miles S.W. Among the nearer & more picturesque objects are Umbagog and Winnipiseogee lakes, Androscoggin and Connecticut rivers, & numerous smaller lakes & streams. Beneath & around, in every direction, the mountains extend many miles from the summit, resembling in their shape the waves of the sea in a storm. The elevated summits of the White Mountains are covered with snow for 9 or 10 months in the year. The Notch or Gap, on the W. side of the mountain, is a deep & narrow defile, in one part only 22 feet wide. The road from Lancaster, N. H., to Portland, Me., which passes through this gap, is crossed by Saco river. Several brooks, the tributaries of the Saco, fall down the sides of the mountains, forming a succession of beautiful cascades, some of them within sight of the road, presenting the wildest & most romantic scenery. The White Mountains belong to a range which extends southwardly to Belchertown, Mass., where it divides into 2 branches, called the Lyme range, & the Mount Tom range.

Incorporated in 1827, & contains a city hall, including a jail, 27 churches,—2 Baptist, 2 Congregational, 1 Dutch Reformed, 5 Episcopal, 1 Jews' Synagogue, 10 Methodist, 3 Presbyterian, 2 Roman Catholic, & 1 Universalist,—3 banks, a savings' bank, 2 insurance offices, an odeon (a hall for public lectures), 2 print. offices, each issuing a daily newspaper, a variety of manufacturing establishments, employing (1850) a capital of $1,379,200, & manufacturing articles valued at $5,859,970. It is well lighted with gas. This thriving city was an inconsiderable village of a few houses, until within the last thirty years. The germ was planted in 1817, when a ferry between that point & Grand street, New York, was established; & from that time its growth was gradual until within eight or ten years, during which its increase in population & business has been truly wonderful. It was incorporated a village in 1827; and in 1851 it received a city charter, to take effect January 1, 1852; & by an act of the legislature consolidated with Brooklyn on the first of Jan., 1855. The location of Williamsburg, upon a gentle slope from the East river, is very pleasant; & its contiguity to New York is favorable to its rapid growth; for thousands of the business men of that city reside in Williamsburg. The ancient village of Bushwick has been almost absorbed by Williamsburg. In benevolent institutions, public schools, &c., Williamsburg is well supplied.

WINCHESTER, Venta Belgarum, a city & parl. and munic. bor. of England, of which it was long the cap., now cap. co. Hants, nearly in its centre, on right bank of the Itchin, across which it communicates with a suburb by a good stone bridge, on the S. Western r. r., 12 miles N.N.E. Southampton, & 62 m. W.S.W. London. Pop. of bor., which includes St. Cross, Winnal, &c., 1851, 13,704. The city is clean, well built, and paved, & it has a venerable appearance, consisting chiefly of a main street, crossed at right angles by many others, which have antique edifices. The anc. city was enclosed by walls, of which the site only is now traceable. Nearly all the S.E. quarter of the city is occupied by the cathedral & its precincts. The cathedral, supposed to have been originally founded in the 2d century, is a vast structure, 545 feet in length externally, 208 feet in breadth at the transept, with a nave 351 feet, a choir 136 feet in length, and a ponderous central tower, 150 feet in height. Except its beautiful W. front, its exterior is heavy, but its interior in many respects equals in magnificence and beauty that of York minster. It contains the tomb of William Rufus; and in a series of carved chests over the choir, the remains of many of the kings of Wessex, and of the Saxon kings of England. Its altar-piece is the celebrated "Raising of Lazarus," by West. The see of Winchester comprises the co. Hants, the greater part of Surrey, & the Channel islands, including 384 pas., & it is the richest in England after that of Durham. At one period, Winchester is said to have had 90 churches, chapels, & monastic institutions, many of which were swept away by the Reformation; at present it has 9 pa. churches, of which those of St. Lawrence, the Mother-church, into which the bishop makes solemn entry on taking the see; St. Maurice, rebuilt in 1840; St. Michael's, a handsome new edifice; and St. Swithin's, over a postern gate, are most worthy of notice." Winchester college, founded by W. of Wykeham in 1387, has fine buildings, & its instruction is preparatory to that of New college, Oxford, also founded by Wykeham; Sir T. Brown, Sir H. Wotton, & the poets Collins, Otway, Hayley, Young, and the two Wartons, were educated at this school. Near it are the remains of an ancient episcopal palace. Other principal structures are St. John's house, an elegant city cross, barracks for 2,000 men, & the assize hall, on the site of an ancient castle; the guildhall, co. jail, co. house of correction, co. hospital, a fine Roman Catholic, & other dissenting chapels, a Benedictine nunnery, removed hither from Brussels; the market-house, theatre, & assembly rooms. Of 4 anc. gates, only the W. remains. In an apartment over it, are preserved the original Winchester bushel of king Edgar, & other Anglo-Saxon standards of measure. Near it is an obelisk to commemorate a destructive visitation of the plague in 1669, & a public cemetery was laid out here in 1840. The hospital of St. Cross, 1 m. S. the city, but now included within the bor., founded in the reign of Stephen, has still a kind of monastic body of brethren, & affords entertainment to the poor and travellers. It has a very remarkable ancient church, & other buildings. Winchester has many almshouses & other charities; also a mechanics' institution, public library, & savings' bank. It is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, & 18 councillors, is the seat of the co. assizes, & has quarter & petty sessions, a recorder's court, & a cheney court of the bishop. It sends 2 members to H. of C. It is the place of election of members for the co. Under the name of Caer-Gwent, it was one of the most important cities of the ancient Britons; it became an important Roman station, and having been taken by Cerdic in 519, it remained the cap. of the kingdom Wessex, & of England, throughout all the Saxon, Danish, & early Norman dynasties. In the time of Henry I., it had reached its greatest eminence; but in the reign of Henry VI., it had materially declined; it was, however, a principal residence of the English sovereigns down to the accession of George I. Henry III. was born here in 1207; & here also Henry VIII. entertained the emperor Charles V.; & their offspring, Mary & Philip, were married at Winchester in 1554.

There have been erected since 1850, 15 counties, viz., Buffalo, Clark, Door, Douglass, Dunn, Kewaunee, Monroe, Outagamie, Ozaukee, Peirce, Polk, Shawana, Trempeleau, Washara & Waupaca.

The portion south of Green bay, Fox & Wisconsin rivers, is composed of timbered & prairie lands, with some swamps & wet prairies, having a vegetable soil from one to two feet deep. North of the Wisconsin river commences a hilly region, swelling as it proceeds north into a mountainous country, with a rugged and broken surface, creating many rapids and falls in the streams, & affording many wild and picturesque views. The N.W. part of the state is covered with immense forests of pine and much rough land, especially bordering Lake Superior. On the ridge dividing the waters flowing N. into Lake Superior, & those flowing south into the Mississippi, are many small lakes, in which fish are abundant. Bordering on the Mississippi and Wisconsin rivers, the soil is rich, & the land generally heavily timbered. Wisconsin is rich in minerals; the great Mississippi lead region lies mostly within its limits; iron ore of the best quality exists bordering the sources of all the streams entering the Mississippi, & copper along the shores of Lake Superior: marble, limestone, sandstone, gypsum, & other variety of minerals abound.

There were in this state in 1850, 1,045,499 acres of land improved, & 1,231,159 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms, $28,528,563, and the value of implements & machinery, $1,641,568. Live Stock.—horses, 30,179; asses & mules, 156; milch cows, 64,339; working oxen, 42,801; other cattle, 76,293; sheep, 124,896; swine, 179,276; value of live stock, $4,897,385. Agricultural Products.—Wheat, 4,286,131 bush.els; rye, 81,253; Ind. corn, 1,088,979; oats, 3,414,672; barley, 209,692; buckwheat, 79,878; peas & beans, 20,857; potatoes, 1,442,077; sweet potatoes, 879; value of products of the orchard, $4,823; produce of market gardens, $32,142; pounds of butter made, 3,638,750; of cheese, 469,283; maple sugar, 610,976; molasses, 9,874 gallons; bees wax and honey, 131,065 pounds; wool, 253,943; flax, 68,803; hops, 15,930; tobacco, 1,265; hay, tons of, 275,662; hemp, 2; clover seeds, 483 bush.; other grass seeds, 5,003; flax seed, 1,191; and were made, 113 gallons of wine; value of home-made manuf., $42,624; of slaughtered animals, $929,178.

The principal rivers are the Mississippi, which flows along its W. border for a distance of 275 miles. The Wisconsin has its entire course within the state, flows centrally, & enters the Mississippi on its W. border.

It is navigable to the portage of Fox or Neenah river, where a canal is being made, which, when completed, with the contemplated improvements of Fox r., will make a navigable communication between the Mississippi & the lakes. The Chippewa enters the Mississippi further N.W., & is a large river, & St. Croix r. forms a portion of its extreme W. boundary. Rock river rises & flows partly in this state. The other principal rivers are the Menominee river on its E. border, enters Green bay, and the Montreal Lake Superior, & there are several other small streams entering Lake Superior. The Milwaukee, Sheboygan, & others, enter Lake Michigan. The other most noted streams are the Wolf, Bad Axe, & Black rivers. The principal lakes within its borders are Winnebago, Horican, Kashkohong, & the four lakes in the S., & many small ones in the N.

The principal places in the state are Madison, the capital, Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha, Osaukee, Green Bay, Jamesville, & Prairie du Chien. There were in Jan. 1854, 4 railroads in the state, with 178 miles of road finished and in operation, and 200 in course of construction, and there were 10 banks with a cash cap. of $600,000.

WOOLWICH, a town, pa. & naval port of England, co. Kent, 9 m. E.S.E. London, with which it is connected by railroad. Area of pa. 840 ac. Pop. 25,785, chiefly dependent on the government establishments. The town, about 1 mile in length, is on an elevated site, separated from the Thames by the dockyard; it has a conspicuous old church, a new church, & several chapels; a Scotch church, dissenters' meeting-houses, numerous schools, & a small theatre. The dock-yard, the most ancient in the kingdom, has been enlarged of late years, and has some very fine new docks. Here were built the Royal George, which was lost at Spithead, the Nelson, Trafalgar, & other first-rate ships; but from the comparative shallowness of water in the river, such ships are mostly built at the other naval ports, & this yard is chiefly employed for constructing steamers. Woolwich has the largest arsenal in Britain, covering more than 100 acres, and containing nearly 24,000 pieces of ordnance, besides other warlike materials for the army & navy, a royal laboratory, &c. It is the head-quarters of the royal horse & foot artillery, & royal sappers & miners, for whom, & other corps, here are extensive barracks; and on a fine parade ground, S. the town, are a repository for military models, and an observatory. It is the seat of a royal military academy for engineering & artillery. Woolwich joins with Deptford & Greenwich in returning

WORCESTER, a city, parl. & munic. bor., & co. of England, cap. co. Worcester, on lt. b. of the Severn, here crossed by a 5 arched bridge, 3¼ m. N.W. the Spetchley station of the Birmingham & Bristol railroad, 23 miles N. Gloucester, and 25 miles S.W. Birmingham. Area of city and borough, comprising 11 entire parishes, and other subdivisions, 355 acres. Pop. 1851, 27,528. Standing chiefly between the Severn & the Worcester or Birmingham canal, just above their junction, & sheltered on the E. by a finely-wooded hill, it is one of the best built & handsomest cities in the kingdom. Streets regular, wide, & well paved. In the tything of Whinstones, on its N., are many detached villa residences. On the S. the cathedral and college precincts occupy an extensive area. The city was formerly enclosed by a wall, some vestiges of which remain; & the college precincts were, in early Saxon times, surrounded by separate fortifications, of which the Edgar tower is the chief relic. The cathedral was founded in 680, but the present edifice, with its appendages, dating from the 14th century, is an elegant plain Gothic building, with a fine central tower 200 feet in height. Its interior is very tastefully decorated, and it contains the tomb & effigy of King John, monumental chapel of Arthur, son of Henry VII., monuments to Judge Littleton, Bishop Stillingfleet, &c. Adjoining it are the cloisters, with residences of the cathedral dignitaries, the chapter house, with a valuable library, a large ancient hall, now occupied by the King's school, & the bishop's palace, on a commanding site facing the Severn. The see of Worcester, lately extended, now comprises the cos. Worcester & Warwick, with portions of adjacent counties, in all embracing 362 pas. The tower and octagonal spire of St. Andrew's church, 245½ feet in height, form one of the most conspicuous objects in the city. The churches of St. Clement & St. Nicholas are handsome buildings, & there are 35 churches.—1 Baptist, 20 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 1 Independent, 8 Methodist, 1 Mormon, 1 Roman Catholic, & 2 isolated congregations. Other principal public buildings are, the Guildhall, new county courts, county and city jails, market-house, house of industry, county infirmary, buildings of various schools & charity institutions, public subscription library, & theatre; & here are several remains of monastic establishments, including a commandery of the hospital of St. John. The royal grammar school, or "King's school," founded for 40 scholars by Henry VIII., affords the privilege of competition for 2 exhibitions at Baliol college, Oxford. The Free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, has 14 exhibitions of 30*l.* to the universities and scholarships at Worcester college, & Magdalen hall, Oxford, & at this school, Butler, the author of "Hudibras," & the great Lord Somers, were educated. Here are national, Lancasterian, & several other endowed schools; St. Oswald's hospital for 28 old persons; Nash's charity for aged citizens; Berkeley's hospital; Worfield's charity; Shewring's hospital; Jarvis's charity. There are also a female penitentiary, lying-in, ophthalmic, & other medical institutions, a dispensary, humane, and other societies; & Worcester is the headquarters of the Provincial Medical Association of Great Britain, &, with Glo'ster & Hereford, the place of a triennial musical festival, the proceeds of which are applied to the relief of widows & orphans of the clergy. Principal manufs. are china wares of the first quality, & gloves, of which latter there were in 1842, 28 manuf. houses, producing about 250,000 pairs of gloves annually, though the latter branch of manuf. is reported to be declining. Lace, spirits, leather, nails, and turned wares, are made; there are extensive iron works on the canal and river banks; and the city is the centre of a large trade in corn and hops. Good warehouses & quays border the Severn, which is here navigable for large barges, & Worcester is the entrepot for a large and populous district. It has several banks, and 4 weekly newspapers. Markets, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Races in July and November. The bor. is divided into 6 wards, and governed by a mayor, 11 aldermen, & 36 councillors. It sends 2 mems. to H. of C. It is the place of election of mems. for the co. Under the name of Caer Guarangon it was one of the principal cities of the ancient Britons, and in the early Saxon period became the second bishopric in Mercia. The troops of Cromwell here obtained a decisive victory over those of Charles II., Sept. 3, 1651. Lord Somers was born at Worcester in 1652.

WORCESTERSHIRE, an inland county of England, with a very regular outline, & many detached portions, but mostly bounded by the cos. Warwick on the E., Gloucester on the S., Hereford on the W., Salop and Stafford on the N. Area, 738 sq. m., or 472,165 ac., of which about 400,000 are estimated to be arable, or in meadows & pastures. Inhabited houses 1851, 55,639. Pop. 276,926. It is fertile well watered, and richly wooded. Principal rivers, the Severn, & its affls. the Avon & Teme, all having a S. course. The Malvern hills in the S.W. separate it from Herefordshire. The Bredon hills in the S.E. rise to 900 feet in height. Wheat is extensively raised; hops are an important crop in some parts: orchards are numerous, & a great deal of cider & perry is made. Cattle & sheep are fattened here. Farms of all sizes, but mostly small. Coal is found at Dudley; in the N. detached dist. at Droitwich are Brine springs; building stone and clay are other chief minerals. Carpets are made at Kidderminster, glass & iron wares at Dudley & Stourbridge, gloves & porcelain at Worcester, needles & fish hooks at Redditch & Feckenham; and in 1847, 973 persons were employed in woollen, and 500 do. in silk mills. Numerous canals, and the Birmingham and Gloucester railroad, intersect the co. Worcestershire is divided into 10 divisions, in the diocese of Worcester, & Oxford circuit. After Worcester, the cap., the principal towns are the bors. Evesham, Droitwich, Kidderminster, Bewdley, & Dudley. The co. with bors. sends 12 members to H. of C.

WURTEMBERG, p. o., Lawrence co., Pa.

WÜRTEMBERG (KINGDOM OF), a state of S.W. Germany, between lat. 47° 35′ & 49° 35′ 30″ N., and lon. 8° 15′ & 10° 30′ E.; bounded E. by Bavaria, S. by the lake of Constance, S.W., W., & N. by Baden. Capital, Stuttgart. Length 140 m; breadth 20 to 100 m. It is divided into the circles Neckar, Black Forest, Danube, & Jaxt. Area, 7,658 sq. m. Pop. 1852, 1,733,-243. The territory belongs to the basins of the Rhine & Danube. Its entire surface is mountainous except in the S. The principal chain is that of the Alps of Swabia, which unites on the S.W. with the Schwarzwald, & separates the basins of the Neckar & Danube; the highest points are not more than 3,800 feet. The principal rivs. are the Danube & Neckar, the latter of which drains the greater part of the kingdom. The territory is in many places highly picturesque. A portion of the lake of Constance belongs to Würtemberg, & there are many small lakes in the S., the chief of which is the Feder-see. Climate in general temperate & healthy, but variable. Temperature ranges from 77° to 86° in summer, & 5° to 10° Fahr. in winter. The soil is extremely fertile in the valleys of the Tauber, the Neckar & its affls., & on the lake of Constance; the usual grains are raised more than necessary for home consumption. Agriculture has made rapid progress, & there is an excellent agricultural institute at Holsenheim. The potato, introduced in 1710, is now the principal sustenance of one-fourth of the population. The cultivation of the vine is limited to the valley of the Neckar & the Tauber, & to the shores of the lake of Constance. The Neckar wines are the best; some of the others resemble Rhenish wines. No country in Germany produces fruit in such abundance as Würtemberg. The principal products are apples, pears, prunes, & cherries. Fruit-trees are cultivated over all the territory, but especially in the valley of the Neckar; beet-root is grown for the manufacture of sugar; hemp, lint, tobacco, & hops, are raised in small quantities. The Alp & the Schwarzwald are covered with vast forests, which yield valuable timber. The rearing of horses, cattle, & sheep, is an important branch of industry; these are in general of good breeds. The principal mineral products are iron & coal, which are abundant, & the working of which, in 1840, employed 330 miners. Silver, copper, cobalt, & lead, are found in small quantities; & there are quarries of excellent building stones & marble. Würtemberg has a great many mineral springs; the best-frequented baths are those of Wildbad, the only thermal springs in the territory. Salt is an important product, & turf is very abundant. Manufactures are unimportant; they comprise linens, woollens, silks, carpets, hosiery, leather, porcelain, iron, & steel goods, & tobacco; breweries & distilleries are numerous. The transit trade is considerable, chiefly by the navigation of the Neckar. A line of railroad has been opened from Stuttgart N. to Heilbronn, & another S.E. to Geislingen, & thence S. by Ulm, Biberach, & Ravensburg, to Friedrichshafen, on the lake of Constance. Würtemberg has long been favorably distinguished for the number & excellence of its educational establishments. Each commune, & even hamlet, has its primary school, attendance at which is obligatory on children between the ages of 6 & 14, & the number at school is in the proportion of 1 in 6 of the pop. The university of Tübingen is one of the most celebrated in Germany; there are infant schools in the cap. & several of the larger towns, & an institution for young ladies, founded by Queen Catherine; normal schools, polytechnic & military schools. Wurtemberg is a constitutional representative kingdom, governed according to the constitution of 1819, with a diet of 2 chambers. The pop. is almost exclusively German, except a few Jews & some colonies of French Protestants; the majority belong to the evangelical church, formed by the union of the Lutherans & Reformers in 1823, & only about 1-3d are Rom. Cathls.—all sects are tolerated. The army consists of 19,017 men in time of war, & 8,275 in time of peace; every male subject is liable to serve from the age of 25 to 31. The citadel of Hohen-zollern is the only fortress. Revenue 1854, 12,174,938 Rhenish florins; expenditure, 12,148,-631 florins. Debt June 30th, 1851, 48,423,718 florins. In the 15th century, the county of Wurtemberg, in Swabia, was erected into a duchy by the Emperor Maximilian; this was greatly extended by Napoleon, who created it an electorate in 1803, & gave to its sovereign the title of king in 1806.

YORK, Eboracum, the second city of England in point of rank, though not in size or commercial importance, a parl. & munic. bor. & co. of itself, cap. county Yorkshire, near the centre of which it stands, at the junction of the three ridings and ainsty, on the Ouse, at the influx of the Foss, & at the meeting of r. roads from Berwick, London, & the central cos., 22 m. N.E. Leeds. Lat. 53° 57′ 45″ N., lon. 1° 4′ 34″ W. Area of city 2,720 ac. Pop. 1851, 36,303. The parl. borough comprises in whole or in part 36 pas. and some extra-parochial dists., and is nearly coincident with the munic. bor. Pop. of bor. 40,359. The city is enclosed by ancient walls, flanked with towers, and forming a fine promenade; & is entered by five principal, & five minor gateways, some of which former are remarkable structures. The Ouse & Foss traverse the interior of the city; the Foss is crossed by 4 bridges, & the Ouse by an elegant bridge of three arches. York is well built, & generally handsome; has several broad thoroughfares, as Bootham, Petergate, Colliergate, and Walmgate, running from N. to S., and crossed by Micklegate, Ousegate, Pavement, St. Saviour's-gate, with other streets less regularly laid out. In its centre, a wide open space called Parliament street, terminates at one end in Sampson square; besides which, there are several other squares, & Peaseholme green, a large area where wool and leather fairs are held. Except the castle, occupying nearly 4 acres, between the Ouse and Foss, & containing the fine county hall & jail, most of the public edifices of interest are in the N. of the city. At the head of these is York minster or cathedral, the finest structure of its kind in England, mostly built in the 13th & 14th centuries, 524¼ feet in length, & 222 ft. in breadth internally, with a great tower 234 ft. in height, magnificent Western front flanked by 2 towers 196 ft. in height, & very richly adorned within. It was set on fire by the lunatic Martin in 1829, and suffered from an accidental fire in 1840, but the injuries to it have been fully repaired. The see of York comprises the E. & W. Ridings of the co. & the archdeaconry of Cleveland; the authority of the archbishop extends over the prov. of York, consisting, with the archbishopric, of the bishoprics Durham, Carlisle, Chester, Ripon, & Sodor and Man. Many of the churches are handsome; St. Michael-le-Belfry & St. Martin's are built in the late perpendicular style; All-Saints, St. Mary's, Castlegate, St. Denis, St. Lawrence, St. Margaret, and St. Mary Bishop-hill the Elder, are all fine structures; & All-Saints' Pavement is in part built of the ruins of the ancient Eboracum. The churches number 40, viz., 24 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 2 Independent, 8 Methodist, 2 Roman Catholic, 1 Swedenborgian, 1 Unitarian, & 1 isolated congregation. The chapter-house; the mansion-house, with an Ionic colonnade & a fine state-room; the guild-hall, a noble Gothic structure of the 15th century; the assembly-rooms, concert-hall, theatre, buildings of the Yorkshire philosophical society, museum, subscription library with 17,000 vols., city jail, & the chief r. r. station, deserve especial notice amongst the numerous public buildings. Outside of the city are the county hospital; a lunatic asylum, independent of the Retreat, another & famous institution for the insane, about 1 m. distant, managed by the Society of Friends; the cavalry barracks, and Bishopsthorpe palace, the residence of the archbishop. A fine planted walk extends along the Ouse, & near it are excellent baths. York has several Roman antiquities, the remains of an abbey founded by William Rufus, & of a college founded by Henry VI. The city was until lately the seat of the principal Unitarian college, now removed to Manchester. It is governed by a lord mayor, & had, until the municipal Reform Act, a corporation, who sat, as in London, in two separate chambers. It is now divided into 6 wards, & has 12 aldermen & 36 councillors. Courts of assize for the city & co. are held in it twice annually, and it has quarter sessions, a court of pleas, & petty sessions, twice weekly. Several commercial corporations exist in the city; glass & iron wares, carpets, white & red lead, linens, woollens, paper hangings, & many articles of luxury are manufactured. York has an active trade in the import of coal, but its chief prosperity is due to its being resorted to by the gentry of N. England, as a kind of northern metropolis. It has two important banking companies, & it communicates by the Great North of England r. r. with Darlington, Durham, and Newcastle; by the York and North Midland r. r. with Sheffield & Derby; & by other r. roads with Whitby, Hull, Scarborough, &c. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, & Saturday. Large sales of cattle & horses take place at fortnightly fairs; other fairs are held during the year. Races are held three times annually, about 1 m. S.ward. It sends 2 mems. to H. of C. York was the residence of Hadrian, Severus, Constantius Chlorus, Constantine, & other Roman emperors, & the funeral obsequies of Severus, who died there A.D. 212, are supposed to have been performed on Sivers hill, W. the city. Under the Saxons it was successively the cap. of the kingdoms Northumberland and Deira. It suffered greatly for opposing William the Conqueror. In the civil wars it sided actively with the king, but it was equally noted for its opposition to the arbitrary decrees of James II.—Ainsty of. [YORKSHIRE.]

YORKSHIRE, the largest co. of England, in its N. part, between lat. 53° 18′ & 54° 40′ N., and lon. 0° 10′ E., & 2° 37′ W., having E. the N. Sea, & landward the cos. Durham, Westmoreland, Lancashire, Cheshire, Derby, Notts, & Lincoln, from which last it is mostly separated by the estuary of the Humber. Area, 5,983 sq. m., or 3,829,280 ac., of which about 2,500,000 are estimated to be productive. Inhabited houses 1851, 120,188. Pop. 1,797,995. Surface very much diversified; in the N.W. are some of the highest mountains in England; elsewhere barren moors are alternated with some of the richest tracts in the kingdom. In the W. are limestone & coal strata, succeeded towards the E. by lias, oolite, & chalk. Rivers, including the Don, Wharfe, Air, Ure, Swale, Derwent, & Hull, are all tributaries of the Ouse and Humber, except the Tees, forming the N. boundary, & the Ribble in the extreme W. Principal capes, Flamborough-head and Spurn-head. Yorkshire is both an agricultural & grazing, and a manufacturing co. of the first rank. Large numbers of horses are bred; & the co. supplies many of the cows used in the London dairies. Sheep have been estimated at 1,200,000, and the annual produce of wool at 2,800 packs. Hogs are numerous, & York is famous for its hams. Properties more subdivided in the N. & W. than in the E. Farms generally small. The W. division of the co. is the chief seat of mining & manufacturing industry, & in 1847, 117,085 persons (mostly in the W. Riding) were reported to be employed in woollen, cotton, flax, & silk mills. The co. is divided into N., E., & W. Ridings (a name said to be derived from a Saxon word signifying thirds), each of which sends 2 members to H. of C.; & into the ainsty of the city of York. It is subdivided into 17 wapentakes & 2 liberties, and into 613 parishes. It contains one archiepiscopal city, in the see of which, and that of Ripon, it is mostly comprised; and it has 17 parl. bors. & 59 market towns. It sends with its bors. 39 mems. to H. of C. The ainsty, immediately S.W. the city of York, comprises an area of 86 sq. m., or 55,040 ac. Except so far as the city is concerned, it is included in the W. Riding.—The E. Riding; area, 1,201 sq. m., or 768,419 ac. Inhabited houses 1851, 44,363. Pop. 220,983. Comprising the hilly district termed the wolds, & much moorland; but greater agricultural improvement has been lately made there than in any other part of the co. It is watered by the Derwent and Hull rivers, & is traversed along its S. extremity by the Hull & Selby r. r. It contains the towns Hull, Beverley, Great Driffield, Market-Weighton, Pocklington, & Bridlington.—The N. Riding; area, 2,109 sq. m., or 1,350,121 ac. Inhabited houses 1851, 44,446. Pop. 215,214. Is chiefly famous as a grazing country; it contains the rich agricultural dists. Cleveland & Ryedale, & has mines of alum & lead, with freestone & marble quarries. Principal rivers, the Ure, Swale, & Tees; & it is traversed by the Great North of England r. r., & the lines from York to Whitby & Scarborough. Within it are the towns Northallerton (which may be considered its cap.), Boroughbridge, Richmond, Thirsk, Stokesley, Kirkby-Moorside, Pickering, Scarborough, & Whitby.—The W. Riding comprises all the S. & W. parts of Yorkshire, & borders on six other counties. Area, excluding ainsty, 2,669 sq. m., or 1,708,026 ac. Inhabited houses 1851, 264,302. Pop. 1,325,495. Surface very irregular, & it contains some of the best land & most picturesque scenery in England. Principal rivers, the Wharfe, Calder, Aire, Don, & Ribble; & it is intersected by numerous canals & by r. roads between all of its large towns. About 12,000 acres of common land have been enclosed & rendered arable. Principal crop, wheat. Timber is plentiful, and a large part of the surface is in pasture; though less attention has been paid to cattle-breeding than in the other Ridings. The valuable coal-beds around Leeds, Sheffield, Bradford, & Wakefield, have been a main source of the prosperity of those towns; iron, stone, & lead, at Grassington & Pateley-bridge, are also abundant. In manufacturing industry, this Riding has importance equal to that of S. Lancashire. Leeds, Bradford, Huddersfield, Halifax, Wakefield, & Dewsbury, are the great seats of the English woollen manufactures; flax-spinning is extensively carried on at Leeds; Sheffield has manufs. of the best cutlery and hardwares; and Rotherham possesses large iron works. Cotton manufs. have been established at Easingwold. Besides the above-named towns, Pontefract, Barnsley, Doncaster, Bawtrey, Thorne, Goole, Selby, Wetherby, Otley, Knaresborough, Ripley, Ripon, & Skipton, are in this Riding.

ZOLLVEREIN (The), a Union for the purposes of trade among several of the states of Germany. The arrangement for perfecting this Union were in progress many years, & it came into practical operation at the beginning of 1834. Previous to that time the states of which the Union is composed did not allow of the introduction of merchandise across their respective frontiers without the payment of a duty; and in the same cases, where domestic industry was to be protected, the importation of many articles was prohibited. The principle of the commercial league is to destroy all the frontier custom houses between the leagued states; to allow of the freest intercourse between the people of all the different states comprising the Union; and thus give to the inhabitants of each the fullest advantage to be derived from a community of interest, and from attending, in a most important degree, their markets for supply, and the field for the exercise of their industry. Duties on the introduction of merchandise from countries not comprised within the Union, have, since the 1st of January, 1834, been collected at uniform rates at the custom-houses established on the exterior boundaries of the frontier states, and a principle for dividing the amount of the duties thus collected has been adopted between the governments, without consideration as to which is the country for whose immediate use the importations are intended, or any circumstance other than the proportionate amount of population.

The following table exhibits the names of the different states composing the league, the area of each, the number of its inhabitants by which the distribution is regulated, & the proportionate amount which each is entitled to receive out of the entire collections made in the custom-houses of the frontier states:—

Recent changes in the Zolverein or German customs Union. The discussions in the assemblies of the League have, especially of late years, been a good deal influenced by political considerations. A league, called the Steurverein, had been formed in opposition to, or in rivalry with the Prussian league, by Hanover, Oldenburg, & Brunswick. But a treaty negotiated between Hanover & Prussia on the 7th Sept., 1851, provided for the incorporation, from the 1st of January, 1854, of Hanover & the other states included in the Steurverein, with the Prussian Union. Some modifications have been introduced by the treaty into the basis of the League, but they are of little importance except to the parties immediately interested. An important commercial treaty between Austria & Prussia was concluded in February, 1853, limited in duration to twelve years, & by which a complete freedom of trade between the two countries has been established in all articles of raw produce; and all prohibitions, with a few specified exceptions, against importing the products of the one into the territories of the other, has been abolished.
